Realities

Remember what you are Not just an "animal,"
A thing of flesh, blood and bone...

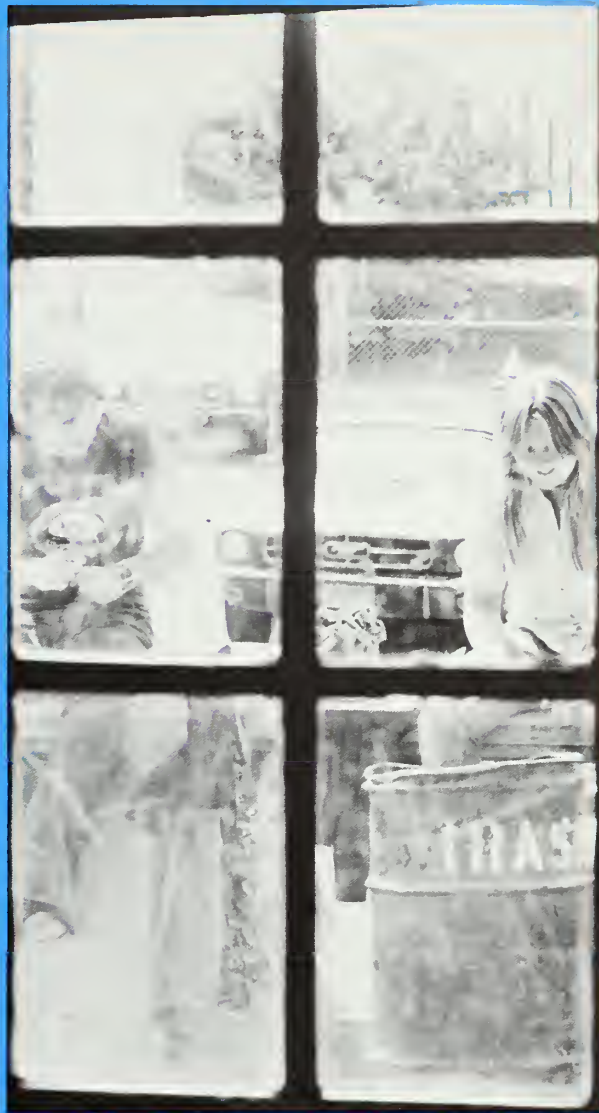

Rather, a special being
 Whose reality is of the spirit,
 The "rationalis," and hopefully,
 The "sapiens"...

Dream your dreams,
But build them
Not with the gossamer
Cloth of myth and fancy
But upon solid
Substance, fashioned of Reality.

Be free with your smile
And it will Reflect back to you ...

Be gentle
And kind to others
And, yes, you will learn
The secret of love...

So, in parting,
Thy prayerful wish
For each one of you
Is a life, filled with Meaningful purpose
And intertwined with Golden strands of love.

John Colter

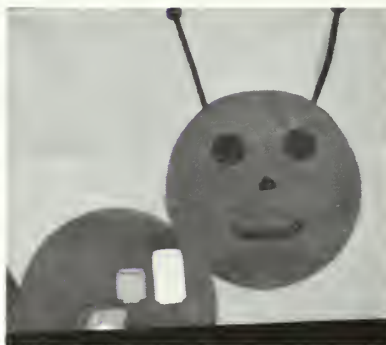

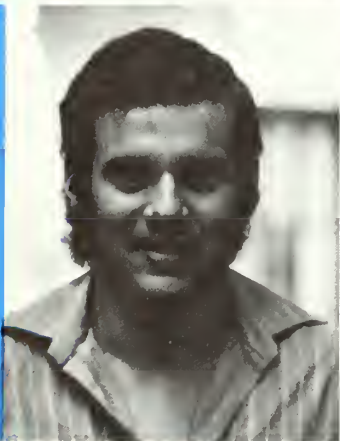

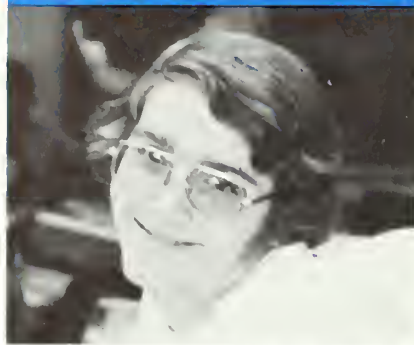

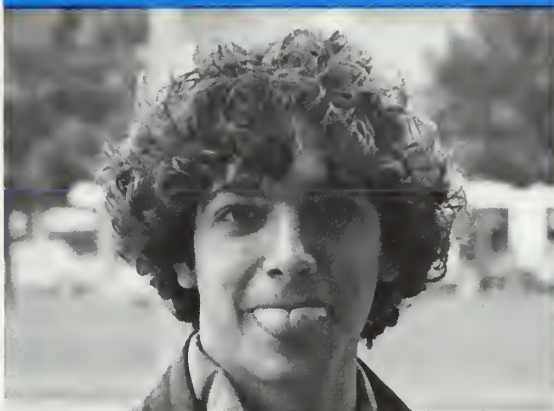

To wake at dawn with a winged heat and give thanks for another day of living...

Oh what a tangled web we weave...when first we practice to deceive.
Sir Walter Scott

PEOPLE!

I may never again measure my life in years. My cycle of growth may never again be so clearly defined for me. Now, all that I can see are the patterns that have emerged from four years of very concentrated experience, so full it can hardly be remembered.

It's just a teenage wasteland ...

If I should leave you with anything, let it be Hope. For in that one word lies endless tomorrows. The fulfillment of timeless yesterdays. One could not go were it for the Hope we share;

That there is always a tomorrow and it will be better, brighter, a more pleasing gift of love, a gentle act of faith.

Yesterday is gone, so they say, but you and I know that it is always a beginning of tomorrow that we fashion today.

It is Hope that promises Peace where yesterday's hate proved fully. And so, too, it mirrors an eternal love to grow for another, as another once loved. It is Faith that says he still loves.

Today is but the first day of life. One never says goodbye, but only fare thee well until we meet again.

ADMINISTRATION

GEORGE FUSCO, ADMINISTRATIVE HEADMASTER

HENRY TOCZYLOWSKI, SENIOR HOUSEMASTER

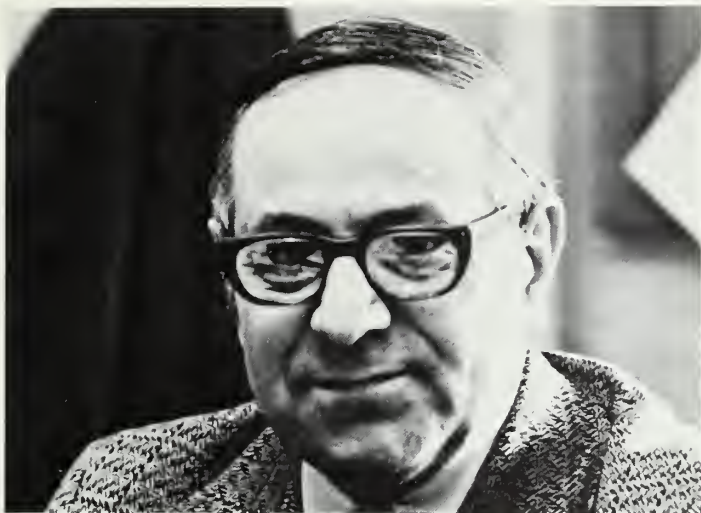

REED TAYLOR, ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT

Graduation signifies another important milestone in the lives of each member of the class of 1977. You must now look to the future. My sincere hope for each of you is that your dreams and ambitions of the past four years become realities; that your days at Arlington High School in some small measure will have contributed to success and happiness in the future. To each and everyone of you: "Good health, good luck, and may a favorable wind be always at your back!"

In Memoriam

Scott Martin

July 31, 1959 ~ June 20, 1976

Scott was good, he was damn good. Scott was a good brother to me and the rest of the family, and I'm sure also a very good friend. Scott and I shared alot of good times together, as well as having our fights and arguments. We were close, as all good brothers are to one another. I love my family and I never realized just how much I loved him - and still do, until now, now that he's gone. The short life Scott lived, he lived to the fullest. Scott shares alot of memories with alot of people. I constantly think of him and the memories we share. Scott is gone, and so is a part of my life. I pray that he's alright and is happy where he is now. I know I talk for many other people. Until then, Scott, I say to you, from your family and your friends, we all love you and miss you very much. May God bless.

In Memoriam

Daniel Joseph Buckley
July 9, 1958 ~ Oct. 28, 1974

It is poetically said that the Lord of the universe comes down into the valley of tears and looks for a beautiful flower. When He finds it, He takes it, root and all, and transplants it into the valley of eternal bliss.

In Memoriam

Karen McCully
May 26, 1959 ~ Oct. 28, 1976

For Karen

One small candle warmly beckons ...
Waving softly in the breeze
Ceasing with a twinkle
Reaching, straining to be strong
Wonderous to childrens' eyes
Giving of its all to brighten life itself
Fading sadly of an autumn evening
... Yet illuminates our hearts forever.

Suzanne Grapser

We feel Karen made us all realize how wonderful it was to see the sun rise each day and to think of that day as an adventure. She had such spirit and zest for everything she did ~ and though she is no longer with us ~ we think she touched everyone with her own special magic and that can never die.

~ a former teacher

To the class of 1977

As you may have noticed, the senior house office has been pretty busy throughout the year, and I have not always had as much chance to sit down and talk with each of you about your present lives, your hopes and your dreams, as I might have liked. But now, with a page in your yearbook, I finally have a chance to say some of the things that I might have talked about with each of you, had there been more time.

I have known many of you for three years now. That is a long time and many things have happened. I have seen you grow and change. We have gone through a gross of kleenex boxes together. We have had some hassles and some rough times.

It sometimes seems like I only saw you when something went wrong or when one was in trouble. Sometimes you saw me angry and distracted — But what I hope for each of you, and what I have been working for these past three years, is that you will leave here able to take responsibility for yourselves. In whatever situation you go onto from here — whether it be work, higher education or the service — you won't have a housemaster for the teacher to send discipline slips to. What you do will be up to you. Whatever field you choose, I wish you all a very happy and successful future.

Senior Housemaster
Henry Toczyłowski

More than 2,000 years ago Plato said, "the direction in which education starts a person will determine their future life." For many, Arlington High School has been a solid start — for a few; troubled times which will necessitate immediate re-evaluation.

The past three years have brought new experiences — and with them — difficulties. Have you faced these problems, or turned your backs and minds to them? Your primary responsibility is to yourself. Merely wishing them to disappear without attempting a solution is cheating yourself.

Take an honest look and assess your position after twelve years of formal education. Will you blame others for your shortcomings or will you realistically deal with them? It's too easy to toss blame around like you would a hot potato.

If you have not accepted responsibility for your life by now, it will become more arduous as the years fly by.

I have seen you mature through your relationship with other students and faculty members. I have had the good fortune to be associated with each of you. You have become a permanent part of my life — something I will cherish for the rest of my years.

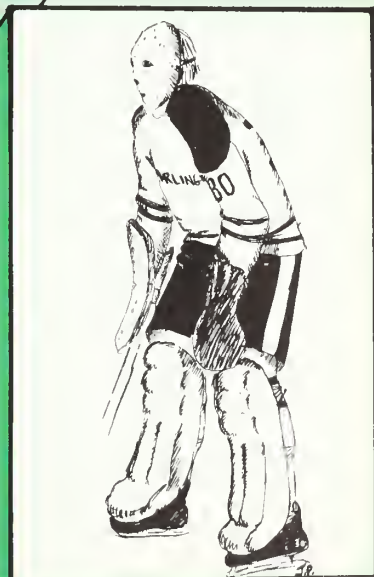

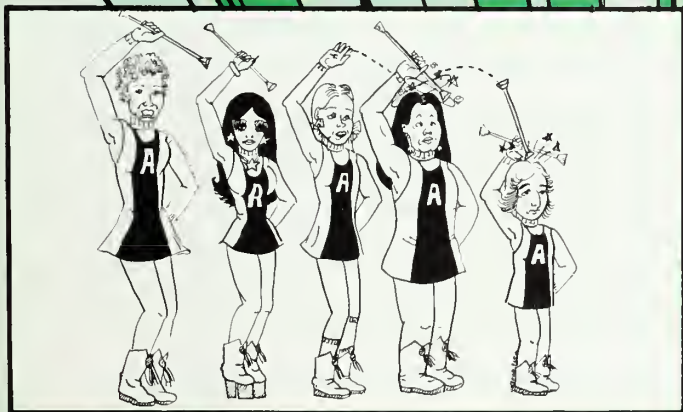

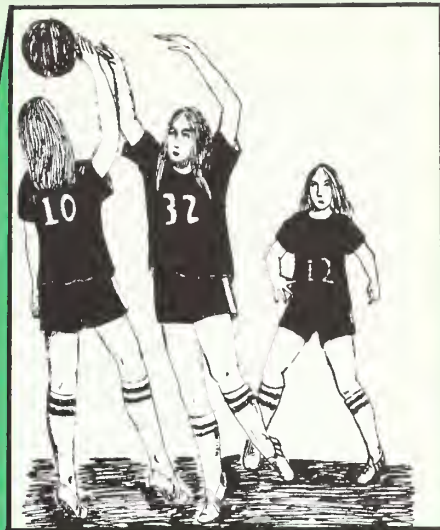

"Look not mournfully into the Past. It comes not again. Wisely improve the Present. It is yours. Go forth to meet the shadowy Future, without fear, and walk manly with heart."

Sincere Congratulations to You All.
Richard D. Collomb
Assistant Senior Housemaster

Wishing you the blessings of peace, love, and happiness always.

Referendum Defeated; Students Boycott Classes

On March 19, 1975, a few students walked out of classes to have a cigarette. Some students went out to enjoy the sunshine. Many walked out for lack of anything better to do. However, most of the students walked out to protest the defeat by town voters of a referendum proposing an addition to Arlington High School.

For months, a group of concerned students had been carrying on a campaign for the replacement of the decrepit Building A and the installation of adequate athletic facilities. The SOS (Save Our School) supporters were the real protestors, upset by what they felt was a real loss to the town and school. They felt that a mass walkout would demonstrate their anger and disappointment.

Throughout the first two classes of the morning, organizers spread the word that there was to be a student walkout during third period. Many students went out to the front lawn at the appointed hour. The rest left after Mr. Fusco announced that he would not attempt to stop the boycott.

Posters were made bearing slogans such as "Save Our School" and "This Building Is Condemned." Much of the student population (2600) stood on the front lawn to protest. The rest stood on Mass. Ave. Consequently, police were called in to reroute the blocked traffic. Some students stood on parked cars and picketed while others started a classroom on the roof, complete with desks and textbooks.

The highlight of the day proved to be a cameraman from Channel 4 News. Wherever he took his camera, he was followed by a huge hoard of students hoping to get on TV. After conferring with the rather distraught Mr. Fusco, the cameraman cast himself into the roll of the Pied Piper of Hamelin. He walked backwards into the high school, followed by hundreds of students.

After many people were lured back to school by the cameraman, the walkout gradually broke up. Most students went home, and classes remained half-full at best.

In September of 1975, another walkout was organized. This time, its purpose was to protest the institution of the 3-6-9 attendance policy. However, only one hundred students participated. Some were disgusted over the fiasco of the previous spring. Others decided to stay in because it was cloudy. Many students thought it foolish to protest a regulation that was devised to make students go to their classes by skipping those classes.

Although none of the organizers of the first walkout were punished, many participants in the 3-6-9 walkout were suspended. Since then, no students have left school to protest an issue.

Students walk out to protest the defeat of a referendum that would have given them better athletic facilities and replaced Building A.

Exhibitionism Becomes Fad At A.H.S.

One of the few original fads of the 70's caught on during our freshman year at AHS - streaking.

Streaking consisted of slipping on a pair of sneakers and not much else and running for dear life through a crowded area. This was clearly not a hobby for the mild and meek.

One of the more famous streakers to go down in the journals of AHS history is Billy Reardon, who made a daring streak through the cafeteria during lunch, much to the delight of students.

Another streaker, Mark Bell, was a bit less successful in displaying his physique to the populous when he was tackled by Mr. Ralph Giobbe.

Proms And Semis Held For Class Of '77

Who are you asking? What color is your dress? Who are you doubling with? Such is the jargon of a person on his way to a semi-formal or prom.

Arlington High sponsors four of these thrilling events; a Junior prom and semi-formal and a Senior prom and semiformal. Our class is noted for its disastrous prom semi-formal Junior year. It seems that (God forbid) the planned date of our semi-formal interfered with the basketball schedule. Due to this major atrocity, the semi was postponed until March 19. This would have been wonderful except that the prom was only a month later. This bothered some people terribly because if they had a lousy time going to the semi with a certain person and they wanted to go to the prom with someone else, they would feel like a creep for not asking the original person.

Our class ended up dancing on each others toes because the proms and semi-formals were always held at places with microscopic dance floors. The Junior semi-formal was held at the Sons of Italy hall in Arlington (This was convenient for people who had to walk). The Senior semi-formal was held at the exciting Burlington Holiday Inn. Students were overjoyed to find that the "Poet's Lounge" was conveniently located at the Holiday Inn but were distressed to see Mr. Collomb standing at the door. The Senior Prom is always held at that marvelously wonderful place, the Chateau DeVille.

Students tend to have mixed feelings about these events. "I never saw so many drunk people in my whole life!" said one. "They are a hassle but I enjoy myself once I get there," said another student. Many students seem to have the customs involved. "I don't know what color corsage I should get her and I hate wearing a suit," claims one irate promgoer. However, most students seem to enjoy proms and semi-formals because they are a break from ordinary weekend partying.

A student making a speech at the senior convention.

Students reveal their social habits

A survey taken recently at Arlington High School showed surprising results about the social habits of students. Approximately 300 students were asked questions about their leisure time activities.

Most kids felt they could pass for an older age. This is how the majority responded:

MALES

Age	Age they can pass for
15	16-17
16	18
17	18
18	18-19

FEMALES

Age	Age they can pass for
15	16-18
16	18-20
17	18-21
18	18-21

Students were somewhat divided as to the most popular places to go on their nights out. The movies attracted the largest amount with 24 percent. Other spots included parks with 20 percent, the more popular ones were Summer St., Robbins Farm, Spy Pond, Kelwin Manor and Stratton School, 15 percent went to parties, 12 percent went to the High School or Buttrick's, 9.5 percent went night clubbing. The remaining 20 percent went roller skating, cruising, to Harvard Square, or the Burlington Mall for a night out.

The majority of kids went out in crowds of at least with three or four friends and preferred older kids or kids the same age for friends.

Curfews were enforced for the majority. Eleven o'clock on weeknights and midnight on weekends were the most common curfews.

Approximately 50 percent of all students have their licenses and are allowed use of a car often. This is a bit frightening when one sees that 83 percent of the kids surveyed drink alcoholic beverages. Six percent claim to be heavy drinkers, 50 percent drink often and 27 percent drink seldomly.

Beer was the most popular alcoholic beverage consumed, with Miller, Michelob, Schlitz and Heinichen being named as the most popular brands.

Some kids preferred mixed drinks such as tequila sunrise, tango, sombrero, and sloe gin.

And The Winner Is. . .

"And the winner is Joe Snog." Yes, once again someone is running for something - why else are people all of a sudden saying "hi" to you in the halls? Be it class president or senator, student council elections seemed to go on endlessly.

In 1975-76 the Student Council officers included President Jeff Stein, Vice-President Jennifer Preston, and Secretaries Noreen Flynn and Jane Shaughnessy. However, they all graduated in 1976 and are of no concern to us, so we won't mention them again in this article although they did seem to be decent individuals. We were fortunate enough to have classmate Terry Goodhue for Student Council Treasurer.

The 1976-77 (That's us) officers included President Barry O'Connor, Vice-President Betsy Brooks, Secretaries Susan Keane and Tricia Barry, and Treasurer Bob Stein. However, Bob belongs to the Class of '78 and is of no concern to us, so we won't mention him again although he seemed to be a decent individual.

These hard-working, energetic types spent their time running around hysterically, organizing anything that stood still, including the Student Advisory, Interclub, Social, Orientation, Student Affairs, and Communications Committees.

Our class officers, all seven of them, included Jr. Class President Larry Colella, Jr. Vice-President Paula Gilligan, Jr. Secretary Jane Hegarty, Jr. Treasurer and Sr. President Ricky Quarantello, Sr. Vice-President Tom Augustino, Sr. Secretary Denise Bianchi, and Sr. Treasurer Terry Goodhue.

The main function of these class officers is to arrange proms and semi-formals. The Jr. class officers went about doing so in a rather interesting manner. It seemed that no matter what date was selected, it somehow interfered with (God forbid!) the basketball schedule. In addition to this, all sorts of problems erupted over trying to find an available hall. Finally, the Sons of Italy Hall in Arlington was selected which proved very convenient for those who wished to take the bus or walk to the function.

The Semi-formal was finally held on March 13, much to the dismay of students when they realized that the Prom was to be held a few weeks afterwards, and the chaos of who's going with who would start once again.

Fire Drill Plague Envelopes A.H.S.

Most members of the Class of '77 can remember spending more of their sophomore year outside rather than in classrooms. The reason was a never ending plague of fire drills.

For different reasons, certain students, delighted in pulling the alarms, much to the dismay of administrators who had to explain the interruptions to fire officials. Some students pulled them to protest the defeat of the referendum proposing an addition to the high school. Others pulled the alarms because everyone else was doing it. A few students claimed to have pulled fire alarms because of an uncontrollable muscular spasm.

The faculty, particularly the science teachers, seemed to dislike the fire drills. More than one teacher had to destroy a test that was interrupted during a fire drill, which had given the students time to discuss answers.

Students had mixed reactions about the fire drills. Many hated the frantic race for coats and pocketbooks so they could go out in the cold. To hardier people, fire drills meant time to catch up on current gossip or to have a cigarette. Fire drills also did wonders for a boring class and developed the leg muscles of science students.

Eventually, the administration managed to defeat the fire drill pullers. Bored students, enlisted from stuffy study halls, were stationed in front of every fire box. Not only was a new method of avoiding study halls invented, but a cure was found for the plague of false fire alarms.

SOCIAL HABITS

Only 20 percent of the students responding didn't smoke, of the remaining 80 percent, 16 percent smoked constantly, 50 percent smoke rarely. Preferred brands of cigarettes included Marlboro, Winston and Newport.

When students do stay home at night 33 percent watch the television, 24 percent have friends over, 21 percent do homework, 16 percent sleep and the remaining 6 percent listen to music.

The six most popular TV shows are Welcome Back Kotter, Happy Days, Starsky and Hutch, M-A-S-H, Charlie's Angels and Saturday Night.

Music also was important to most people, with students divided evenly between a preference for hard or soft rock. Most kids have a stereo and the five most popular songs listed on the survey by kids were Stairway to Heaven, I Never Cried, If You Leave Me Now, Do You Feel Like We Do?, and Low Down.

Thirty percent of the students have steady boy or girl friends and 33 percent date off and on.

Students as teachers

They are all jumping around, enthusiastically making suggestions and corrections.

The center of their attention - a make-shift voting booth constructed from a cardboard box, and a tall, dark-haired, soft-spoken senior.

They are sixth-graders at Hardy Elementary School. The senior is Peter Camm, one of the 22 A.H.S. students who tutor at primary schools through the Elementary Education Program.

Since 1968, an ever-increasing number of students at Arlington High have been leaving school under the direction of Mr. Arthur Botelho, and working with elementary school students.

Elementary Education grew out of a suggestion made during a Science Club meeting that high school students attempt to supplement the minimal amount of science taught at elementary schools.

Volunteers would leave school either during fifth period studies or spend an entire day at a primary school instead of attending Arlington High.

This method proved impractical but enthusiasm was high and an alternative was worked out. Elementary Education became a course. The course was so structured that for the first three weeks of the year, students attend classes, develop lesson plans, and learn how to teach effectively. Once this training period is completed, students are assigned classes in primary schools.

Four days a week the students leave school after their fifth period classes and teach the grade school children. The fifth day is spent in a classroom discussion of events and problems encountered.

Elementary Education is separate from the Teacher Aide program and the Child Care course. Many of the students enrolled in Elementary Education hope to enter the field of psychology, therapy or education.

Some simply like children and enjoy being with them, and others find the course helps them to learn to relate to people better.

Students grades are based on attendance, preparation of lessons presented to the class and evaluations by both the teacher of the elementary school class and Mr. Botelho.

The class is open to sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Students are still required to have taken one year of science and one year of math before admitted into the program.

Buttrick's

Buttrick's, no more. Yes, Arlington High School's class of '77 was witness to the demise of Buttrick's, not in body but definitely in spirit.

You see, in early 1975 the name of our beloved Buttrick's was changed to Brigham's. The lovely old atmosphere that many came to appreciate weekend nights or during study halls was changed to a new, shiny, and very typical restaurant.

Although the same atmosphere of drunken splendor is evident outside, the inside's just not the same. In our hearts, it will always remain "Buttrick's."

How To Open A Door

A fear is prevalent at A.H.S. - a fear of doors. This fear is manifested by the fact that no one will wittingly open a door. Such fear has forced most students to search in vain for open doors. Often times students will try to squeeze through an open half of a swinging door, even if other people are going through it in the opposite direction. There is no need for such irrational fears.

To overcome our fear of doors, we

Administration Closes In On Truants; Students Fume

One of the more controversial policies introduced at AHS has been the 3-6-9 policy, later revised to 2-4-6. Everyone from Mr. Fusco to the custodians seemed to have some type of opinion on this subject, and it was usually pretty strong.

The problem all started when the administration became increasingly aware of little holidays students began granting themselves. No one came on half-day Wednesdays, Prom days, Semi-formal days, days right before holidays, days right before vacations, or Senior Convention day. When the students began stretching this to include Mondays, every other Thursday, days beginning with the letter F, and the entire season of Lent, the administration retaliated.

Students soon learned to shudder at the numbers 3-6-9 which the administration used so effectively to pull us into shape. The policy went something like this: skipping three classes resulted in a warning to the student, six skips caused perturbed housemasters to contact the student's parents, and should the student dare risk nine skips, he or she would find an "F" on his or her report card for the term.

However, those beastly administrators didn't stop there. In our senior year an even stricter 2-4-6 policy was instituted, filling students with increased dread and fear and filling absence bulletins very sparingly.

It is rumored that students caught skipping next year will be hung by their thumbs in Old Hall and forced to listen to Chemistry lectures.

must first be able to recognize the enemy. A door is easily distinguishable from a wall, because it is easier to pass through a door than a wall; there is no such thing as a wall knob. A door, however, is harder to pass through than a window, but going through a window is more painful, especially a third floor window. Doors also have another identifiable characteristic - handles.

The only doors discussed will be swinging doors. There are two sides to every swinging door - a push side and a pull side. The pull side usually has attached to it some type of handle; the push side doesn't have a handle. It is very important to differentiate between the push and the pull sides of doors. Not only is it embarrassing to apply a push force to a pull door, it is quite lethal as well. The consequences aren't quite so severe if one attempts to pull a push door.

There are three principal categories of swing doors - the open swinging door, the closed swinging door, the half-open or half-closed swinging door, depending on the optimism or pessimism. The test for categorizing a door is to try to run through the door. If you are rendered unconscious by your attempts the door is closed. If you weren't harmed as you ran through the door, the door is open. If half of your body is entwined around a door while the other half is free, that door is partially open.

Many techniques are used to open a door. One must always remember, however, that it is useless and totally redundant to try to open an open door. Methods of opening closed doors include: The Kick, The Hip-Check, The Head, The Nureyev, and, most commonly, The Hand. When using these modes of door opening, it is essential to recall the difference between a push and a pull door. If one becomes confused and uses say The Kick method on a pull door, pain results.

Lounge Opens For Seniors

Writer's Workshop Forms

Ms. Belote, Ms. Gorman, and Mr. Filichia have encouraged an informal gathering of students presently known as the Writer's Workshop. At meetings, the students share their writing and offer constructive criticism. They also discuss entering contests and attending other workshops held in Massachusetts.

The creative efforts of the Workshop will eventually be used in the school literary magazine. The first professionally printed magazine, Vibrations, was put out last year. Membership in the Workshop is open to anyone who cares to explore life in words.

The Senior Lounge was flooded during the summer of 1976 when rain catchers, placed over parts of the roof that were being repaired, failed to work. Water rushed through the opening in the roof of Building A, through the 20's floor, and into the lounge.

The rug shrank and the floor dissolved, making the lounge uninhabitable.

The roofing company paid for all the damages caused by the flood. Mrs. Ortwein, advisor of the student council, said, "After what we went through last year in renovating, I was ready to slit my wrists. But this time we were lucky." The floor was replaced, a new carpet was installed, and the lounge opened within a month.

However, the lounge was not without further difficulties. The candy machine was broken into, the floor was littered with paper and soda cans, and petty gambling flourished. Mr. Fusco gave a "fireside chat" (ala Jimmy Carter) and the situation improved somewhat.

The lounge was open to all seniors during their study periods. Besides socializing, seniors could engage in such activities as yelling, T.V. watching, pinball, studying (rare), cards, and general horsing around. Harrassing underclassmen who dared to venture into the lounge was also a favorite pastime.

S.T.E.P.; Alternative Education

Located in a storefront on Mass. Ave. is the home for Arlington's alternate high school — School To Employment Program or S.T.E.P. This program was originated several years ago for those students who were unable to cope with the impersonal, automated lifestyle of the high school and who could profit from a more personal, flexible program. Most of the students who enter the program are on the verge of dropping out and S.T.E.P. provides a way for them to finish high school and for some, to continue on to higher education.

The program is run by John Lennon, who was one of the originators, and Peggy Dulany both of whom also teach classes. They are assisted by teachers. The program offers most of the traditional high school subjects and the students are free to take courses at the high school. The students have recently built a darkroom in the basement of their building and are planning to acquire cameras and through this equipment to learn how to take pictures and about darkroom techniques.

Most of the students in S.T.E.P. enjoy it more and learn more than they did at the high school. They seem to really care about their school and how it is run, as is evidenced by their extremely active and concerned Student Council. For students who were on the brink of dropping out, S.T.E.P. has provided an environment in which while learning they receive support so as to help them graduate from high school and into the world.

How to handle your headmaster

Sometime in your four corners of high school you will meet a man whom many refer to with various names, but is most commonly known as Mr. Fusco.

Meeting Mr. Fusco could cause one to become slightly unnerved, for it's not easy to explain why you became "a victim of society" to a total stranger. So, to aid the student in familiarization with his beloved headmaster, The Fourth Estate decided to release some information on the life of George Fusco and some tips to avoid trouble in your inevitable rendezvous.

George Francis Fusco was born in the North End. He was the seventh of fifteen children born to Italian immigrants.

He was educated through the Medford school system, doing fairly well in his studies and participating in varsity sports.

Strange as it sounds, George was a considerable trouble-maker. But there was a teacher, a woman by the name of Miss Lynch, who took an interest in her Junior High Latin student, George Fusco. From there on, Mr. Fusco realized where he was headed in life.

He attended Amherst College, participating in varsity baseball (captain) and basketball. His majors were social studies and social sciences and he minored in languages.

As for teaching experiences, Mr. Fusco has taught French, Italian, History and coached for various sports throughout his career.

Then, as for many, World War II claimed our Mr. Fusco for three years (1942-45) as a member of the U.S. Navy on an aircraft carrier in the South Pacific.

Returning to an entirely new set of students, George became Director of Physical Activities for three years, followed by teaching history once again. Then, in the early sixties, he took the job of Guidance Counselor.

Some may remember when Arlington High became a four year school, with the addition of a Freshman Wing. At this time Mr. Fusco became Freshman Headmaster. It took four more years for Mr. Fusco to achieve his present position of Administrative Headmaster.

TIPS

1. Try to meet or talk to Mr. Fusco before you are pushed into the office.
2. Don't bother Mr. Fusco when he looks like he'll kill the next person who talks to him. Wait until he's in the halls or some other opportune time.
3. Say you're responsible if you did wrong. Even if you are not going to be responsible, promise you will be. If you aren't responsible, you'll be back, anyway. Promising responsibility saves problems in the first encounter. (NOTE: Between pages 14 and 20 in the Handbook, the word "responsible" can be found over 10 times. Take a hint.)
4. Don't complain about things he's heard such as:
 - a. hard teachers,
 - b. too much homework, or
 - c. not enough vacations.

It's useless to do so.

5. Telling him one of your ancestors had him for a teacher impresses him but it doesn't help you.
6. Mention at least one good thing about either:
 - a. him
 - b. you, or
 - c. A.H.S.

Hopefully, this will help both Mr. Fusco and his future visitors. Mr. Fusco will, hopefully, keep his job for many years to come. Unknown to most of the students, he's doing a good job.

Space Cadets Land On A.H.S.

Fads come and go, and one of the most fleeting fads at AHS was the occurrence of Space Cadets.

What was a Space Cadet? Apparently, their major purpose was wearing striped sneakers and acting cool.

Some people at the time claimed that Space Cadets had no purpose, others said that Space Cadets were a secret underground organization, while still others claimed they were an attempt to break down the Jock-Rat battle even though most Space Cadets seemed to have jock tendencies.

The Interview, a success

The lights dimmed as a blue aura covered the stage, violin music filled the air when suddenly white-faced, black-clothed bodies started filing down the aisles ... The Interview, the first play put on this year, had begun.

However, it was not exactly a play but a fugue. This is a dramatization of a certain theme which is portrayed by a series of different acts, skits or monologues. The theme in this case was the categorization and futility of modern day life.

The first scene consisted of four people being interviewed by a "machine", made up of a group of actors. The action went on to show a governor double-talking a crowd, a dull instructor shouting orders at a group and a lonely, tragedy stricken girl at a party with unsympathetic people.

The performance was excellently portrayed and thought-provoking as well.

The Interview has recently been selected as Arlington High School's submittal in the upcoming New England Drama Festival to be held this winter. We wish the cast and crew good luck, for we are sure they will do well.

Busriding Determined Hazardous

"Remember," instructed Kind-Hearted Soul, "when the bus comes, push, shove, kick, pommel, bite, and gnaw, because your life depends upon it." "Why?" Unworldly Freshman asked, "Is riding on a bus that bad?" "Stand back, and watch the loading procedure of the first bus."

The scene which unfolded itself before Unworldly and Kind-Hearted was reminiscent of lunchtime in the cafeteria. Students punched each other, used books as clubs, kicked with lead-lined platform shoes. This viciousness was caused by the overwhelming desire to obtain a seat on the bus. Four hundred and eighty-three students were crammed into the bus, as it rumbled off, leaving behind the battle-wounded.

"Do you think you can get on a bus now?" inquired Kind-Hearted. "I don't think getting on will be so hard." Unworldly replied, "I just hope I live until I reach my stop!" After an arduous scuffle, both Unworldly and Kind-Hearted procured a space on the bus. With one hand fused to the bar above him and the other hand ready to counter any attack, Unworldly discovered a disadvantage to busriding; there was no air inside the bus.

"Is there any way to breathe?" gurgled Unworldly, unaccustomed to not breathing. "You take a deep breath as the doors open at each stop." Kind-Hearted said, tightening his grip on the bar. As the bus rolled to a stop, Unworldly was swept away in the sea of departing students. Kind-Hearted had foreseen being swept away and had held on tighter.

As Unworldly rolled around on the sidewalk, where he had been deposited by the mob, he realized he was at his stop. When he finally regained his composure, he made a decision. Unworldly was determined never to ride on a bus again, he would walk back and forth to school. At least walking was conducive to life.

Musicians Hold Exchange Concerts

One of the more memorable events of the Arlington High School Music Department and one of its major goals every year was an exchange trip with another school for four or five days.

In 1975, music students traveled by bus to Downscrew, Ontario, a suburb of Toronto. On the way up, buses were caught in a blizzard. Everyone still debates whether it was an eighteen or twenty hour trip. Perhaps the habitual announcement, "Five More Minutes!" caused the confusion.

Upon arrival in Downscrew at 2:30 a.m., students were greeted by buckets of cold Kentucky Fried Chicken. However, few hosts remained to claim students and there was some confusion as to where everyone was going to spend what was the rest of the night.

After settling in, everyone had a good time in Toronto. The two schools performed for each other and partied excessively. Weeks later, music students from Downscrew visited Arlington High and were reunited with their friends. They found AHS very different from their school.

In 1976, music students again made an exchange, this time to Scarsdale, a suburb of New York City. The bus trip was only five hours long. However, one student saw little gain in time over the previous year as she was shown home movies of her hosts until 2:00 A.M.

The two bands gave concerts by themselves and together. Many students were able to see New York City for the first time.

The exchange concerts highlighted the year for many AHS music students. They were able to make friends in distant places and encounter many different experiences. One group of Arlington students enjoyed the trip to Toronto so much that they returned to Downscrew several months later to visit their friends.

Basketball Team Renounces Sexism

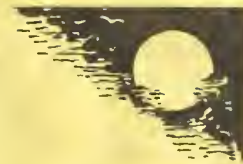

If nothing else, people cannot accuse the Class of '77 of being sexist, thanks to the efforts of Ellen Mahoney, Diana Steele, and Brenda Kenney in their incessant battle for good charts, full water bottles, and a decent seat on the bus.

The girls managed their success against sexism by being the first girls at AHS to manage a boys' varsity team, namely basketball.

Diana and Ellen first began managing with Ellen's older brother, Jimmy, during their Junior year. They were fortunate to manage one of the greatest basketball teams ever to come out of AHS, which stayed number one through the season and made the playoffs.

The girls enjoyed themselves so much that they resumed their positions in their Senior year. Brenda Kenney also joined the management then.

Coach John Cody and the team accepted the girls very well and seemed pleased to have them as managers. The girls' duties included keeping score, keeping charts, and informing the press of game results.

Double Sessions Claim Students

It seems that our class spent a lot of time in the dark - literally. This problem arose because of two major problems. First, the building of the Ottoson Jr. High and the Jr. High East caused us to spend the end of our freshman year and the beginning of sophomore year rushing to get to class by 7:00. Double sessions let us out by noon, but getting up at 6:00 A.M. left many students so tired that they went to sleep by mid-afternoon.

In the midst of all this, President Nixon stepped in with his cure-all for the energy crisis, a cancellation of daylight savings time.

Many of us were now able to count the stars during first period and watch the sunrise during homeroom, a very (yawn) awe-inspiring way to begin the day.

However, we grew quite fond of half-days. It was nice to get out at noon and do homework, earn some extra money, or just hang around. When full days were finally reinstated after Christmas vacation sophomore year, a lot of disgruntled students tried very hard to get used to "endless" fifty minute classes and eating lunch at 12:30 instead of 10:15.

Good Morning, Today Is. . .

George Francis Fusco, our beloved administrative headmaster, will remain always in the hearts of A.H.S. students for his outstanding repertoire of public announcements. During our four years at A.H.S., Mr. Fusco's discourse was characterized by an acute sensitivity that will send him down in history alongside much greater orators as Demosthenes, Clarence Darrow, and William Jennings Bryant, not to mention Reed K. Taylor.

How can one forget those striking moments in public address history when Mr. Fusco brought tears to our eyes with his poignant renditions of "License Plate Numbers of Cars Parked Illegally In the Back Parking Lot," and "Mr. Zavaglia to the Main Office."

Then there are those special moments which only occur once in a lifetime. For instance, consider "Would all of you who cannot hear this announcement please come to the main office."

Remember when Mr. Fusco interrupted class just in time to save A.H.S. from mass confusion? "I would like to remind students," he stated, "That today is Tuesday, not Monday and students should follow their Tuesday schedules."

Students often waited in anticipation for Mr. Fusco to break the monotony of their fourth period class with an informative soliloquy. Lunchroom instructions were dramatized before the entire school. "I am pleased to announce that the teachers grill is open today," and, while discoursing on the fast food system, "Go to the stall that you prefer," brought smiles to the faces of both students and faculty.

Above all, who can forget Mr. Fusco's prize-winning one liner - "Thank you, that is all, and have a good day."?

...for a moment of silence

Notes on notebooks

Did you ever notice that you can tell a person's personality by their notebook?

There are an infinite number of different styles you can have in a notebook. There is the huge (six-inch binder) type, commonly seen with thousands of assorted sundry papers sticking out in a confused array (known as the "Monster Notebook"). Then there is the manila folder notebook. This is generally for the lazy or weak armed student.

When you see someone with snags in their sweaters and marks on their arm, you know they are a spiral notebook enthusiast. Personally, I think the metal spiral should be declared a lethal weapon. Many spiral notebook fans go overboard in their enthusiasm and carry eight or ten of them at a time.

The colors and designs of notebooks are also very revealing. There is dull black, vibrant red, pink polka-dot, striped, checked, or swirled. There are Charlies Brown notebooks, comic-book character covers, "Fonzie" and "Starsky and Hutch" notebooks. As a matter of fact, we can continue our lunchbox childhood throughout notebook covers.

So next time you see a friend of yours, look at their notebook, and see what it tells you about the person.

Building A Renovation Attempted

Many aging movie stars leave Hollywood from time to time, get a face lift, and sneak back looking better but still creaking underneath. This seemed to work so well that it was used on Arlington High's aging "A" Building.

Building A had too much character to destroy it completely. Such things as flooded classrooms, no heat, faulty wiring, worn-out staircases, and a decrepit gym created such fond memories for alumni of the high school that they couldn't bear to vote for a new school and deprive their children of the challenge involved in manipulating the "A" Building daily. However, something did need to be done to prevent student fatalities, and a face lift seemed to be just the ticket.

So, over the summer vacation all sorts of nifty things happened to AHS. When the Class of '77 returned to school for their junior year, they noticed all kinds of exciting arrows and swirls painted all over the corridors. The following summer, the town got even more creative and decided to put a new roof on Building A. Of course, AHS can't just put on a roof thoughtlessly. Our repairs took place during a hurricane, resulting in several badly flooded rooms including, alas, the Senior Lounge.

Students interested in the construction industry got a good chance for observation as the flooded rooms were bailed out and replastered while those who enjoyed reading got to attend classes in the library.

DECA Store Opened

DECA Store

One of the newer and more enjoyable facilities instituted during the Class of '77's stay at AHS was the Distributive Education classes' store located in the cafeteria.

The Store was first built in 1974 in a corner of the cafeteria where it was promptly burnt to a crisp by vandals (the kind that give us wonderful teenagers a bad name).

But the DECA kids were not quitters. They held a fire sale in their classroom and soon produced another store. Students were able to purchase jackets, T-shirts, jewelry, and candy in addition to school supplies.

DECA also ran a coffee and doughnut shop before school which became very popular. Unfortunately, it became too popular with some students who seemed to prefer it to their first period class.

The program benefitted DECA by teaching students how to run a small retail business through actual experience. Every phase of training was mastered from window decoration to making change and keeping books.

French Club Enjoys Festivities In Quebec

For the past two years the French Club has sponsored a trip to Quebec city. One trip was held in February 1976 and the other in February of 1977. The trips were planned at this time in order that the students could enjoy the annual Winter Carnival that takes place in Quebec City.

Twenty-one students, Miss Williams, Mrs. Fitzpatrick and the Sophomore secretary Mrs. Crowley went to Quebec during the beginning of the Winter Carnival in 1977. This trip lasted four days.

The trip begins about 6:00 in the morning, everyone sleepy-eyed and silent. The bus is loaded and one can still see the stars in the sky telling them that it is too early in the morning. Next in store for the students is a ten hour bus ride over northern Ma., Vermont, across the border to Canada. A stop at McDonalds is enjoyed in the middle of the afternoon by all on the bus.

When we arrived at the hotel there is a waiting period and in this time one has to make sure that they are rooming with all their friends. There are other hassels but one eventually makes it to their room.

The next three days are spent touring the city by bus. One visits such places as the Citadel and its old museum, Parliment Building and a French Canadian farm house for lunch. At night there are many activities for every kind of student. The students can roam the city by themselves. One can visit the Ice Castle made out of ice blocks from the St. Lawrence River. There are slides all over the place for those who wish to make use of them. Popular places included local discotheques and "La Societe."

All students found something in Quebec that they never had encountered before. It might have been trying to find the way back to the hotel by communicating with a person that speaks no English or going in a restaurant famished and finding that the menu is written completely in French. Many students were surprised at how much French they had learned in class and were able to use in reality.

No matter what surprise was found by any student, the trip was enjoyed by all and will be remembered for a lifetime.

MacDonaldland Overthrows Cafeteria

We, the children of the McDonald's generation, finally have seen our deepest dreams come true - fast food service in the cafeteria.

The elation of the students was immense when it was announced that we now had a variety of meals everyday to choose from. Imagine! No more "If it's Tuesday, it must be hamburgers." If we so desired, everyday could be hamburger day.

The program, set up during our senior year, was a junk food junkie's paradise. Everyday we had a choice of hamburgers, hot dogs, subs, pizza, or (for the daring) a special of the day. In other words, something for everyone.

By retaining the special of the day, it was still possible to discover students who have mothers with atrocious cooking skills.

Unfortunately, potato puffs were retained when the program was revamped.

Anything Goes For Basketball Team

Six seconds left with the score tied...Arlington has the ball and no. 23 scores to pull the Trojans ahead! The crowd roars with tension and excitement as the time runs down. The final buzzer sounds with Arlington the victor! Chelsea has been narrowly defeated for the second time.

The 76-77 year will be remembered by fans and team alike as the "anything goes" year. You could never be sure how a game would turn out until it was over. Overtimes, double-overtimes, two point wins and losses all helped to make an exciting, eventful year.

Returning from the 75-76 varsity squad were seniors George Awiszus, Bill Specht, and Danny Lewko and juniors Ronnie Valeri and Chris Hughes (affectionately called the "Bomb Squad" in '75). Other seniors on the team were Mike Giunta, Joe Curran, John Reis, John Giannopoulos, Kevin Brooks, and Dave Carlon. The juniors were Bobby McCormick, John Dickhaut and Frank DiGregorio. The only sophomore was the talented Camilo Santana.

The team will never be forgotten or passed over when memories of our senior year fill our minds.

Release Time Days

Now you see it and now you don't. At least, that's how most people felt about the released time day policy at AHS. We were fortunate enough to be allowed a half-day the first and third Wednesday of each month.

The policy was set up to allow teachers to meet on these free afternoons to discuss problems in their individual departments.

However, it seemed that this convenience was misused because in September of 1976, the program was suspended, thus marking the end of one of the most loved eras in our school's history.

Coed Gym Classes

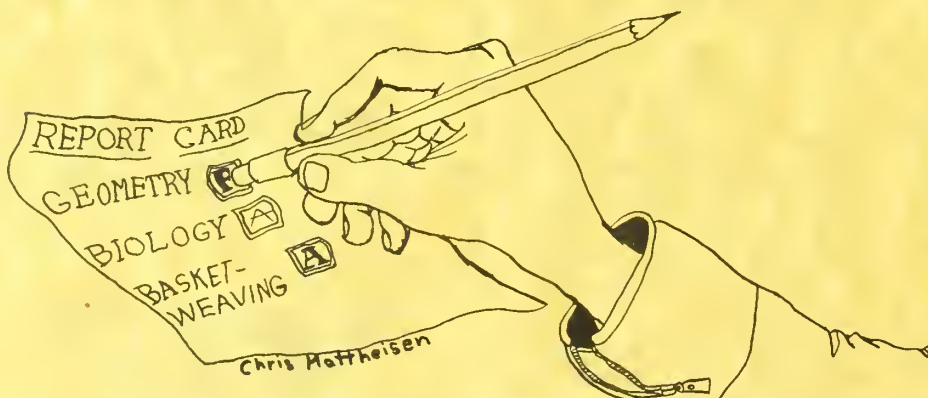

Another farce has been instituted at Arlington High this year - Coed Gym - the original farce being gym itself. The principal purpose behind the installation of Coed Gym was to motivate the students, to instill the values of not skipping gym, and to teach physical education. The failure of all three of these objectives is staggering.

Why the Creatures from the Pit would feel their female students would be inculcated by having male students in their classes is beyond all comprehension. The gym class has remained the same, only the participants have changed sex. Personally, it has never enthused me to run around a cone and back while trying to dodge balls thrown at my head. I'm still not very motivated doing this same activity with boys in my class

Try as they might gym teachers still have no valid reason for students to take gym. Gym is boring. The most exercise you receive in gym is while you change into your gym clothes. The only reason students attend gym is that they will get bagged if they don't go to gym. The sole power of the gym teacher is the power to bag. Be warned! For as surely as the bells do ring, you will be bagged if you skip gym.

A common ception is that physical education should promote physical fitness, not physical fits. In gym class we should be learning how to enjoy a few sports, not how to best maime our opponents, or how to avoid breaking into a sweat. Gym, coed or otherwise, should not be an arduous task, yet too often for too many people it is.

School repairs. . .

I returned to A.H.S. this September and found that the only evidence of improvement was a new roof and an inadequate paint job. Whoever was in control of the paint brush apparently decided that the most beneficial addition to our school would be arrows telling us where we wanted to go supplemented by illegible 3"x5" cards taped over the doors.

What alternative to decrepid rooms and possible decreditation? First of all, more lobbying on the school's part, not only the administration, but the kids too. Second, Arlington's citizens, especially those without children, should be made aware of the benefits of a good school, and the disadvantages of a bad one. Maybe we could offer tours of the high school, exhibits at the libraries, ads in the Advocate, etc. A poor school leads to families with children moving from Arlington. Businesses move away, the tax rate goes up, and Arlington "dies."

Moment of Silence

Friday, October 15, marked the beginning of a new policy at A.H.S., a moment of silence during homeroom. Mr. Fusco mdae clear the fact that prayer or meditation was not mandatory; he seemed to think that repeating the announcement four times would "make it perfectly clear" to quote from one of our less-distinguished 20th century presidents.

It cannot be reasonably denied, however, that the implication of a moment of silence focused toward religion. I realize that the number of students who are actually offended by this practice are few, but the principle, if one wishes to go into it, is unconstitutional.

In any event, a high school homeroom is hardly a stimulating religious atmosphere. In my homeroom of 45, I observed only three or four who appeared to be taking advantage of the opportunity for prayer.

I submit that the small percentage of students for whom this moment of silence was instituted, having gotten along without it up till now, would not be greatly inconvenienced by the termination of this offensive moment.

The First Dance

On October 19th, Arlington High had its first dance of the year. This dance had some bad qualities along with its good ones. The first point I would like to bring up is the bump which protrudes from the floor. This was disturbing as well as being dangerous. While dancing you had to worry about tripping over it. I know that they had kept the temperature in the gym very high to correct this but it seems it didn't really help.

Another problem was the heat in the gym. This was due to the fact that absolutely no windows were open and there was no door leading outside which could be kept open. Naturally, when loads of kids are dancing it is bound to be hot, but this was ridiculous. The heat got so overpowering that kids had to go down to the entrance for air much of the time.

Personally, I liked the idea of having the dance at the high school rather than Ottoson. But there's the problems of the heat and the "bump." Maybe the next time there is a dance, it could be held in the freshman gym. This would be better because there isn't any bump and the door which leads outside could be kept open as it used to be when the dances were held in that gym before.

Well, I guess the most important part of the dance is the band. I really enjoyed the band the Student Council chose. They played a variety of music which I believe a lot of students found to be satisfying. This band was unlike other bands we've had at previous dances. At many of the other dances, the music was so loud that as you were leaving, your ears were still ringing. This band was different. They played loud enough but they didn't play so very loud that you were afraid of losing your hearing.

All in all, I think the first dance was a success. Hopefully, all those that follow will be as good or better.

SIS: Your Student In School

SIS never really believed that the entire series of corners leading to graduation would every really be turned. Now, it looks like our last corner is fast upon us and our high school years will soon be over.

Although all Seniors, including SIS, are looking forward to graduation, there will be many memories left behind. Is there life after high school? The Class of 1977 will soon find out but will also, no doubt, look back as well.

Remember that day in freshman year. . . out of the blue, Mr. Hall's voice shattered every freshman's eardrums with "You're the worst group of freshmen to come through this school in years!" Some daring soul had thrown a bunch of lighted firecrackers into the Freshman Office. That was the same year that stinkbombs were exploded in the passageway during lunch every day in the Spring...

When we were sophomores the school-wide walkout occurred. Although the walkout was supposed to be a protest against the "no" vote by the town regarding a new school, most students left just for the sake of leaving. Still, it was a unique way to spend a school day. News cameras from the Boston stations came and filmed the throng of students trying to organize a march on Town Hall. The spirit of the boycott, however, fizzled out long before the six o'clock news was broadcast.

Streaking, a national fad, eventually fizzled out too, but not before many AHS students tried their hands — or, rather, bodies — at it. Especially during the freshman and sophomore years of the Class of '77, streaking was at its peak. A nimble-footed Senior streaked through the school one day, including the cafeteria at lunchtime, only to find himself trapped in the corridor by his waiting housemaster. Many streaking careers of members of the Class of '77 were similarly short-lived.

On an even lighter note, the G&S production of Oklahoma! was interrupted when the hood of a snorkel jacket got caught on a fire alarm and accidentally set it off. The cast and crew didn't really think it was funny at the time — understandably — but looking back, it was just one of those things. (By the way, anyone who is independently wealthy and who would like to know the owner of the aforementioned snorkel jacket, contact SIS care of the CIA. And remember, readers...SIS will not be knowingly undersold.)

School continued as usual, with some interruptions. The Class of 1977 saw the burning of the school store...co-ed gym became a new, controversial reality, at least in theory...and in our Senior Year the school got a new roof and an extensive paint job. AHS seemed like a turpentine factory for awhile because of the fumes that emanated from the nooks and crannies of the A Building. Aspirin sales for the Arlington area doubled in September alone. Although the repairs couldn't abolish the problems of the school building it became more pleasant and liveable for the time being.

An extra vacation awaited us in January of 1977 when a series of snowstorms hit New England. Like that infamous February of 1969, when we spent only a few days in school, it was an R&R that we warmly welcomed. It was hard to return. Some didn't. What kept most of us going was the realization that May was "just around the corner."

We didn't all make it. Some of the members of the Class of '77 dropped out along the way; and others, sadly, are now deceased. But even that had to be a part of our experiences in order for us to really learn anything about Life.

It hasn't always been easy and it hasn't always been very enjoyable. But SIS thinks that most of the members of the Class of 1977 will agree that Arlington High School has been a unique, and in many ways rewarding, four-year experience.

A Trip Through Arlington

"Oscar, you know I have a lousy sense of direction," announced Moitle. "It took me three days to find your mother's house, and she only lived around the corner. With my sense of direction, and your fallible map reading, I think we should ask for directions and hire a chauffeur."

"Come on, Moitle! We'll find Virginia soon." Oscar reassured. "Besides, we left early enough for this bicentennial — in 1973 for God's sake!"

Staying in Arlington, Virginia and visiting Washington, D.C. had seemed to be a great way to celebrate the bicentennial. At least it seemed to be a great way to Oscar and Moitle Nottooswift in 1973.

Becoming hopelessly lost was nothing new to the Nottooswifts. They were accustomed to being lost on years end. However, celebrating the Fourth of July in Ottawa, Canada was disappointment to them.

In September of 1976, Oscar and Moitle were cruising down Route 2, when Moitle noticed a sign.

"ARLINGTON CENTER NEXT RIGHT," read Moitle aloud. "Arlington Center! Take that next right, Oscar. I don't believe it! Arlington Virginia, at last. I hope our hotel still has our reservations, even though we are four months late."

Unfortunately the Nottooswifts were unaware that there existed more than one Arlington. Unbeknownst to those poor misguided souls, they had found Arlington, Massachusetts not Arlington, Virginia.

Still thinking they were in Arlington, Virginia, the Nottooswifts decided to go straight on to Washington, D.C. They wanted to sightsee before it got dark. Unluckily, they resolved to ask for directions to Washington.

After stopping innocent pedestrians and being laughed at a few times, Oscar and Moitle realized they were not in Arlington, Virginia. They found out they were in Arlington, Massachusetts. The Nottooswifts took failure stoically. They figured what — the hell, — after driving for three years in order to celebrate the bicentennial, they might as well tour Arlington before the end of 1976. Little did they know that Boston, Lexington, and Concord were but a few miles away.

The Nottooswifts drove down Pleasant Street until they hit the Center. Then they hooked a left on Mass. Ave. to try to find an historical society to see if there were arty tours of Arlington. Soon they passed a large decrepit building. Oscar and Moitle believed it to be the historical society's headquarters because it looked ancient. They pulled to a stop in front of the building; they had failed to notice a plaque bearing the inscription "ARLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL."

Because the building looked as if it were going to disintegrate at any moment. The Nottooswifts approached it cautiously. Slowly they crept up the stairs, looking for signs of life. Then they opened the door, which leads to Building A. They stood apprehensively, outside The Senior Lounge.

Suddenly a shrill bell screeched, provoking a near riot. A mob materialized and pushed both Oscar and Moitle up to the thirties. Then the mob began to subside. Another bell rang and the blood thirsty crowd evaporated into the walls, leaving a bewildered Oscar and a bedraggled Moitle.

Moitle, feeling like low tide at Pebble Beach, struggled to her feet. Oscar managed to prop himself up against a wall, which to this very day bears his impression. They stood there resting while listening to the sounds of dust and plaster settling into place. As they were recuperating from their traumatic experience, a typical Arlington High School student sauntered by them.

"Pardon me," Oscar said, addressing Typical Student. "But is this the Historical Society's headquarters?"

"Not quite," answered Typical without much ado, because he couldn't do very much.

"Do you know where we could find a tour guide of Arlington?" inquired Moitle.

"I'll take you on a tour," Typical solved, "We'll start right now!"

Typical Student and the Nottooswifts began their tour of Arlington with the high school. Typical informed Moitle and Oscar that the saturnalia which they had just braved was the changing of classes.

After the first ten minutes of the tour, Moitle was wounded by a sanitary door. Oscar and Typical rushed her to the Nurse's office. There they discovered all the couches were occupied by 'sick' girls, who were skipping gym.

"Why don't they want to go to gym?" interrogated Moitle.

"Because they have gym in the Pit. C'mon, I'll show you!" Typical said, as he led his party to the girls' gym.

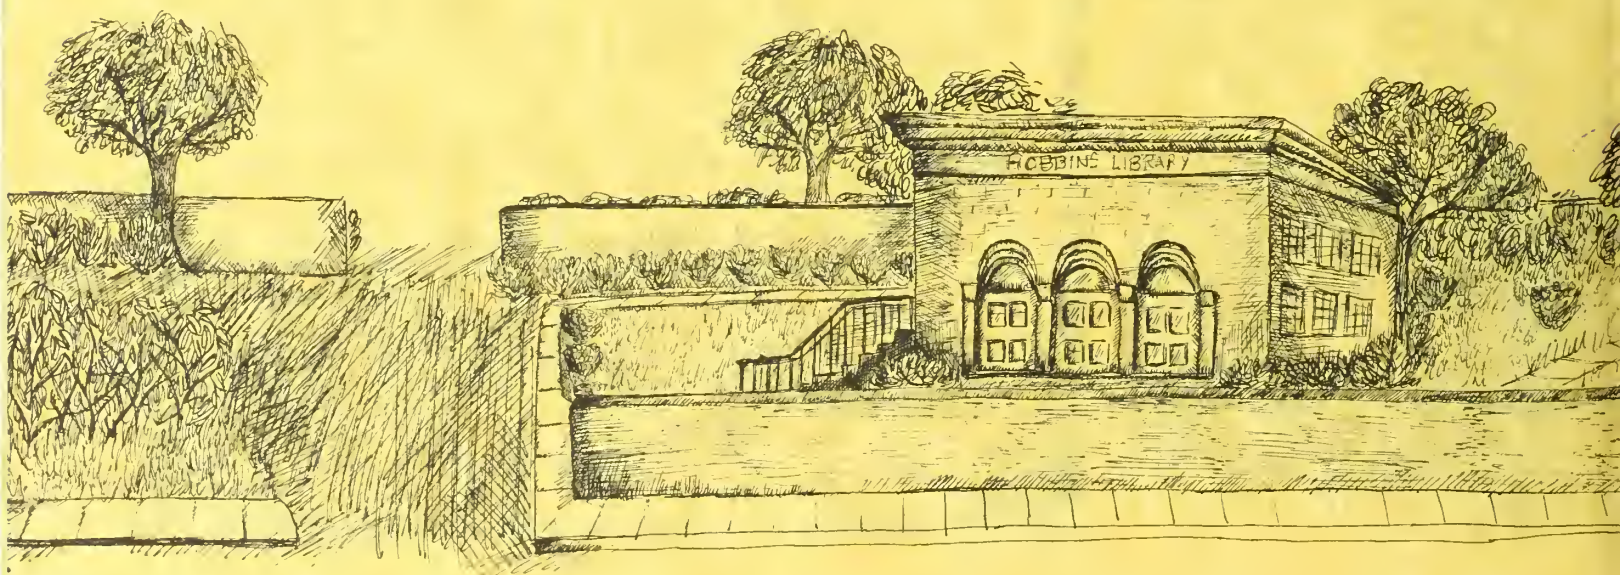

As they entered the gym, they were greeted by wild shrieks. It was nothing personal. Only a floor hockey game.

Typical explained the reason there was one boy in the class. The one boy made the class Co-ed.

Typical directed the Nottooswifts out of the Pit and continued his tour. He pointed out all the places of interest at A.H.S.; the Cafeteria, science labs, the DECA Store, shops, Lowe Auditorium and the smoking areas, (places where students go to smoke, not where the high school is on fire). Typical ended the tour in front of the Senior Lounge from which loud noises were emanating.

"What's going on in there?" Oscar wondered out loud.

"Either the ceiling's falling, the Coke machine's not working, or the tv is working," rejoined Typical. "Take your pick. If you want to go in,

you can find out."

Two men rushed by the Nottooswifts and Typical. They closely resembled Tweedledum and Tweedledee. These two men were Housemaster and Assistant Housemaster, respectively. They were on their way to "find out." Housemaster and Assistant Housemaster are dedicated people — dedicated to the harassment of high school students, in this case seniors.

Tweedledum and Tweedledee rounded up a herd of negligent students, who were responsible for the commotion in the lounge. They led the guilty into the senior office. The tour group followed the herd and was present during the "Senior Loungue is a Privilege" spiel.

After the first twenty minutes of the speech, however, the Nottooswifts and Typical decided to leave A.H.S. and continue their tour. All in all, the Nottooswifts were amazed at A.H.S.; they had never seen anything like it, and will probably never again.

The next stop on their itinerary was the Jason Russell House. "A living memorial to the family who chose to remain firmly in their house and hold up the life of the home." The Nottooswifts were very impressed by such historicity as the Jason Russell House.

As they walked back to the high school to catch the Arlmont bus, Typical explained the bicentennial reinforced concrete. "Those are bicentennial markers which are supposed to indicate historical sites," Typical continued. "The markers are most useful for people trying to park their cars; if you hit one, you know where the curb is. Also, there are plaques all over Arlington describing historical sites. There's one across the street on Time Oldsmobile.

The Nottooswifts were overjoyed about the markers, and they rushed around frantically reading every piece of concrete in sight — even the ones without writing. After reading hundreds of plaques, Moitle exclaimed, "I thought most of the action took place in Concord and Lexington, but it seems like a lot happened in Arlington, Virginia, too!"

The reading of these markers caused a delay in the tour. In order to catch the Arlmont bus, the tour group had to run back to A.H.S. They just managed to board the bus, but there were no seats left. Typical felt it would be wiser to get off the bus at the Park Avenue water tower. This was one of his better ideas because Moitle and Oscar weren't accustomed to the animalistic behavior of some students.

The trio managed to escape from the perils of the Arlmont bus (commonly known as Noah's Ark or mobile zoo. Typical and the Nottooswifts explored the virtues of the water tower and saw a picturesque view of Boston and vicinity. "There is another water tower in Arlington; it's on the opposite hill, Turkey Hill," Typical said. "People aren't allowed to climb up it, although some teenagers do.

Now we'll proceed down Eastern Avenue to the Farm."

"The Farm once belonged to the Robbins family," continued Typical as he led the Nottooswifts to that hallowed park. "Now the Farm is playground by day and a drinking ground by night. Farming was one of the main occupations among the early settlers. There were also a lot of mills. Captain George Cooke's mill was probably the first water powered mill in the New World. It was built in 1630.

After Oscar and Moitle had acted sufficiently touristy at the Farm, Typical took them to Menotomy Rocks Park. On the way Typical told them about the name Menotomy. The Nottooswifts were beginning to tire of historical soliloquies, but they listened anyway. "Menotomy means 'swift running water' or 'large bodies of water,'" droned Typical. "Menotomy is an Indian name. Most of the land around here had been cleared by the Massachusetts Indians who were part of the Algonquin family. The land was cleared before the early white settlers arrived. Next I'll show you the Town Hall."

Oscar and Moitle were duly impressed by the Town Hall and Robbins Library.

By the time the library tour was over, the Nottooswifts wanted to see something different. Typical now felt they could handle the sight of the defeathered Indian, which is in the park between the library and the Town Hall. Once they finished at that park, they went to look at the statue of Uncle Sam. "Arlington is the 'Home of Uncle Sam,'" commented Typical. "You're supposed to look thrilled," reminded Typical because the Nottooswifts looked puzzled.

"I thought Uncle Sam was born in Massachusetts," said Moitle.

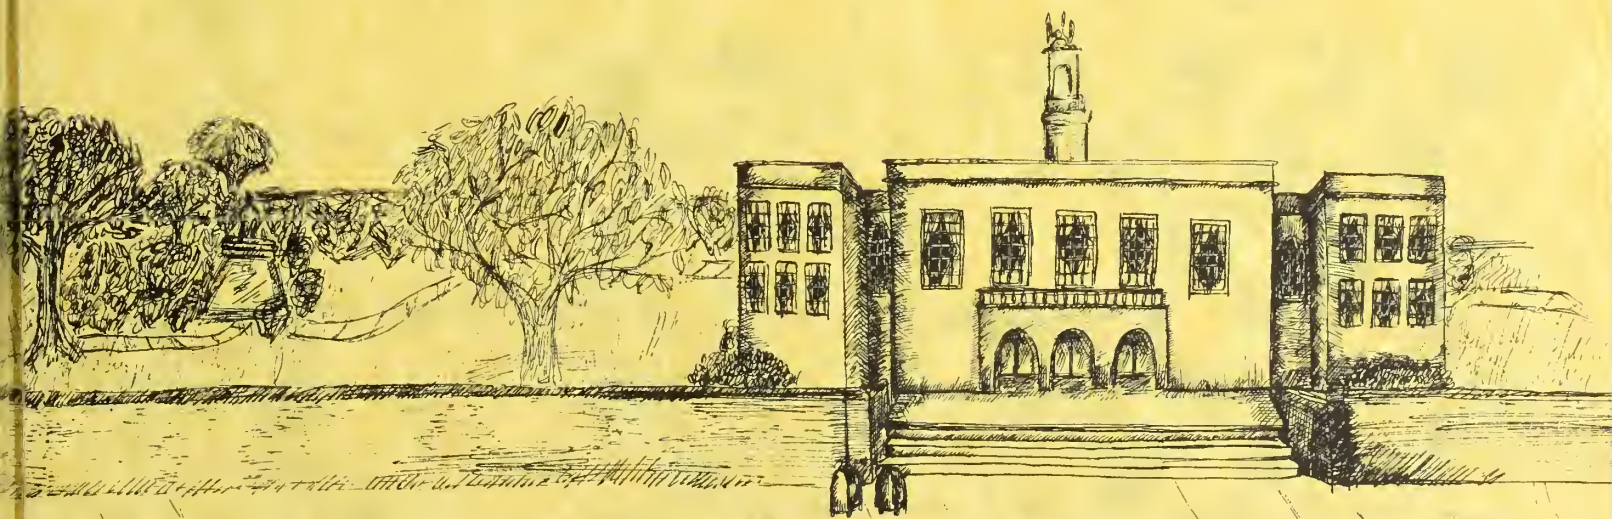

Oscar, Moitle, and Typical caught a bus which was heading for Harvard Square. Once on the bus, Typical pointed out some sights.

As they got off the bus, Moitle asked, "Why are there so many funeral homes?"

"I'm not sure," responded Typical. "But Arlington seems to have an abundance of three businesses — funeral homes, drugstores, and beauty salons. Someone once said that if you dropped dead anywhere in Arlington, the funeral homes would bid for your burial. Let's go down to Thorndike."

The Nottooswifts couldn't take another outburst of history, so they politely inquired the way back to their car. Typical, although being extremely typical, was able to take a slight hint. He told them to get on the bus, ride to the high school, and then get off. "All you have to do," instructed Typical, "is get on the bus and get off at the high school."

The Nottooswifts saw an approaching bus and boarded it. Unfortunately the bus was going to Harvard Square and not to Arlington Heights. The Nottooswifts were last sighted on an Ashmont train desperately trying to locate Arlington High School.

A kaleidoscope of memories
Is reflected in every empty class and hallway here.

Turn around;

There are close friends full of encouragement who make us go on.

Look back;

They tell us to hold onto the best years of our lives.

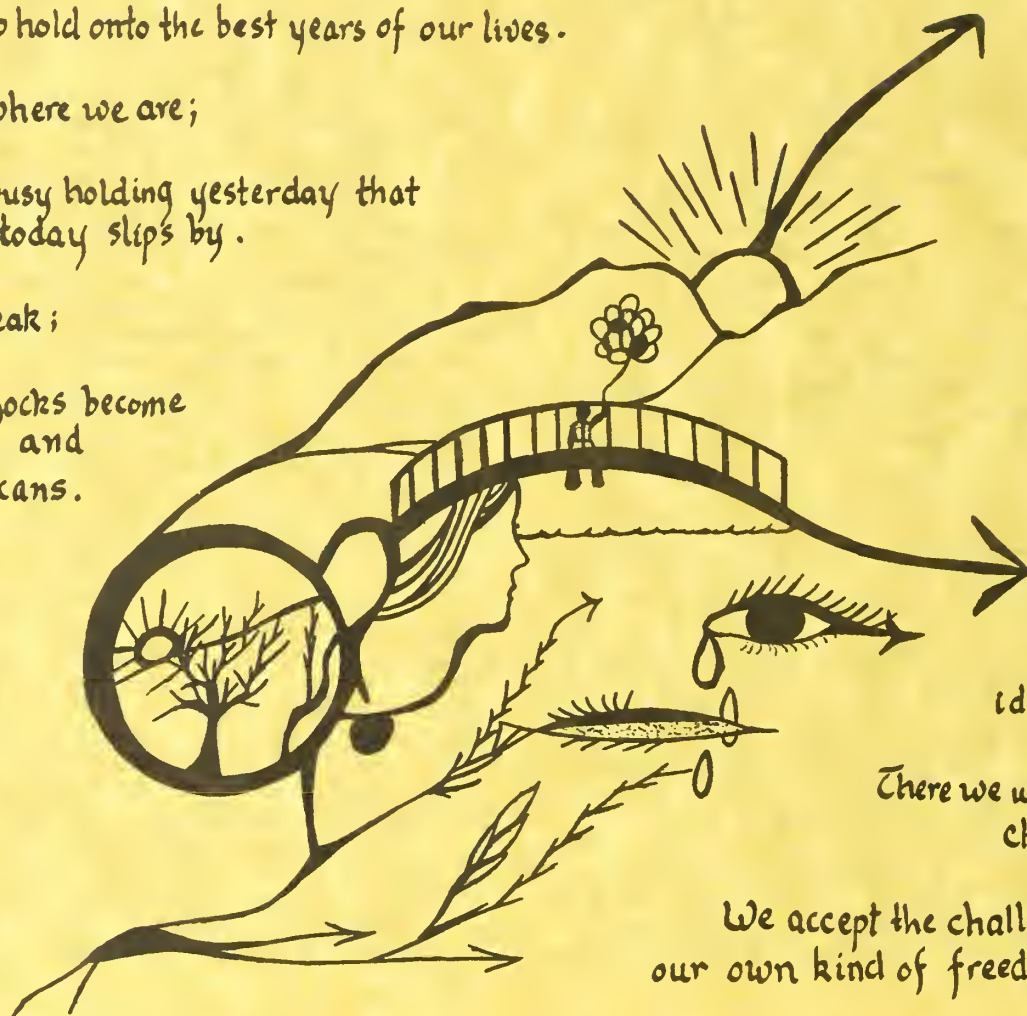

Dare to see where we are;

We are so busy holding yesterday that today slips by.

Go from weak;

Rats and jocks become Democrats and Republicans.

Now to wild;

Slip elects
the next President.

There we were, innocent
children;

We accept the challenge of finding our own kind of freedom.

Now we laugh;

Soon we will be part of this wild world's rush.

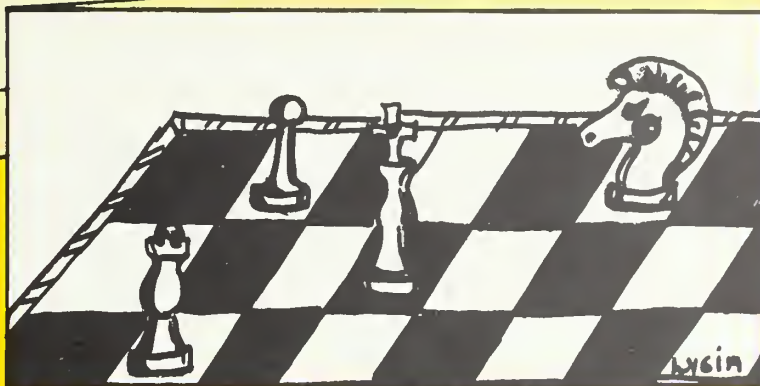

Then we ask;

As kids reaching for something that everyone promised would be there;

How to find the sun;

They tell us it will rise tomorrow.

Vol. 3 No. 2 ARLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL, ARLINGTON, MASSACHUSETTS November 1976

The New England comes with me! in November and hope it, have been in the past, to the government.

If Arlington High supports the new school, the regional nineteen-month project will get underway. The school is taking a look at a reexamining set of standards and a curriculum being developed in the new capital city attached to the French Republic.

Concerning the project's effect on the discipline acceptance of the new school, the French Union says, I don't see how it will affect it. The school is a new school, and the students are familiar with the rigors of Arlington and Arlington High School students are given the opportunity to work with pre-school children daily at a class for pre-schoolers conducted at the First Baptist Church near to the High School. This class is conducted by students under the supervision of Mr. Stanley Kuznetz.

The primary purpose of the Student Council is to represent the student viewpoint in school affairs and to act as a liaison between the student body and the Administration.

All situations brought to the Council's attention, either by the students or the Administration, are explored and acted upon.

The Student Council consists of the officers, the senators, and many different committee members. It probably involves more students than any other club.

We, the officers (Barry, Bob, Betsy, Susan, and Trish), met every day during 7th period. Sure, there were many days when we just kidded around. But, also, there were just as many days that we were there, in Room 81, all afternoon. There were times when it seemed as if there were no end to the work.

Threats to close the lounge, the never ending supply of "Super Krunch," four (out of ten) senior senators showing up for a meeting, forgetting to hire police for the dance, Frank Gangi, counting ballots, and Mrs. Ortwein's baby are memories we will never forget.

We wish the Class of '77 the best of luck. Also, we would like to thank everyone who helped to make this year successful.

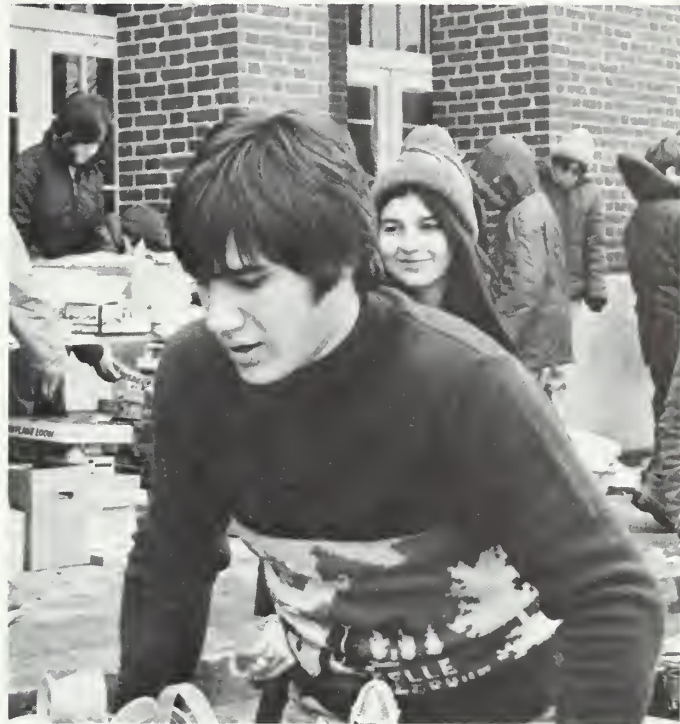

— Barry, Bob, Betsy, Susan, and Trish

FRENCH CLUB

Le Cercle Francais was recently re-established at Arlington High School to provide interested students an opportunity to be exposed to the French culture. The club has attained recognition among faculty and students by means of its cheese-selling event, plus local trips to Chez Jean restaurant, a movie, "The King of Hearts," and to a performance of the world-famous Fretean de Paris. The highlights of the year were the trips to Quebec City during the fabulous "Carnaval de Quebec," and the thrilling trip to Paris, France, where they strolled the Champs-Elysee, visited Versailles, Fontaine Bleu, and so much more during their ten day stay.

The Club was not only a social organization, but served as a means to unite the student body in an educational experience for all.

SPANISH CLUB

The Spanish Club is a newly formed organization at AHS. It is geared toward people who are interested in the Spanish language and Hispanic culture. The Spanish Club took trips to the Spanish speaking areas of Boston, Spanish Restaurants, and other local Spanish oriented activities. In the future, the Spanish Club members would like to travel to Spain and other Spanish speaking countries.

The Armenian Club is an organization open to all students. However, its membership basically consists of 26 Armenian-American students. As a relatively new club in school, it works on an inter-club basis with Belmont, Watertown, Waltham, and Newton.

Dances and parties have served as catalysts for Arlington students to become acquainted with Armenians from the Greater Boston area. The Christmas Party-Dance at St. Stevens Armenian Apostolic Church in Watertown, and the Spring Celebration Dance at the Sheraton Commander Hotel in Cambridge have proved to be two of our very special annual events. This past year these events were enhanced by a successful bake sale in December, which helped to provide funds for our numerous activities.

DEBATING CLUB

Although the Debating Club has been a long established tradition at AHS, it is a novice club and has entered a debate league this year. Approximately 15 students are active participants in debates held on Monday afternoons. This year's national topic was "How Can the Criminal Justice System in the U.S. be Best Improved?" Under the direction of Mr. Dennis Mercurio, the team had a very successful year. Thanks, Mr. Mercurio.

This year the members took a trip to the North End of Boston where they had the opportunity to sample many types of bread, pastry, and pizza. The highlight of the year was a visit to the Italian section of Montreal for which they raised funds by means of a bake sale and stationery sale. MEDICAL CAREERS CLUB

The Medical Careers Club is a club designed to teach people interested in science a little about the various medical careers available to them. The meetings were held every third Thursday of the month at the Nurse's Office across from the Main Office.

Some of the events planned were a bake sale, a car wash, a field trip to Mass. General Hospital in Boston and Youville Hospital in Cambridge. Guest speakers were featured to encourage us in our club purpose.

INTERIOR DESECRATORS INC.

A new club has recently been instituted to alleviate decay within and without A.H.S. — Interior Deseccrators. For many years, vandals have run rampant without any unity. Finally, some constructive action has been taken. This year's activities included the demolition of a cement railing, the attempted torching of the multi-purpose room, and seminars on graffiti and advanced desk-carving. This organization proved an immediate success and promises to be one of the most popular extra-curricular activities.

PUDDLE JUMPING CLUB

The Puddle Jumping Club is an organization for those who are not afraid to get their feet wet. Every year, a state-wide puddle-jumping contest is held, this year at Arlington High. Because of the heavy rains and well-clogged drains, the 1976 contest was extremely competitive. Selected entrants battled for hours in ice-cold puddles in front of the auditorium. A.H.S. was led to a stunning victory by our own Tom Casey and Jeannie Oster.

AUSTRALIAN CLUB

In 1977, a revolutionary new club was instituted at Arlington High: the Australian Club. This club's members are earnest people dedicated to the preservation of Australia. These diligent, stoic students try to preserve the home of the koala bear by thumbing there. Sydney is very popular with Australian Club members, although the Great Barrier Reef receives its share of attention, also.

Next year's trips will include such scintillating places as New Zealand, New Guinea, and Painted Post, N.Y. These exciting pilgrimages will begin by thumbing from Arlington High at 2 o'clock in the morning. Other events in which the Australian Club will participate include the Kalahari Desert Hunt, papyrus-shooting along the Gulf of Mexico, stalking the wild Asparagus, rolling joints under the cafeteria, throwing rocks at cabs.

EXPANDING

A.O.E.

"This is an honor . . . thank you,
But what to say,
For you the time has come to move on,
Those of you I've known, I've enjoyed,
Live and enjoy your years ahead,
Your harvest can be bountiful,
Take time to smell the flowers."

Ken Arnold

DATA PROCESSING

DECA

A.H.S. is the headquarters of two DECA chapters. The primary "in school" duties of the Senior Chapter are to run the school store, to provide a central location for the distribution of school function tickets, and to be an available agency, advisor, or catalyst for other school organizations to raise funds more effectively.

The Junior Chapter is concerned with providing a coffee and tea service before school and for school affairs. This past year, "The Coffee Shop" provided services to the Adult Education program.

The Distribution Education Clubs of America are concerned with attaining and sharpening the skills of marketing, merchandising, and management. The students are involved in authentic business transactions and become exposed to a competitive atmosphere.

Annually, there are regional, state, and national conferences held in which students participate in educational opportunities which surpass the traditional classroom situation. These conferences also afford the students the chance to develop more honest, perceptive evaluations of others.

DECA in Arlington is exclusively student organized, is involved in State competitions, and is consistently a challenge to those who have committed themselves to the retail business aspects of our society.

SURVIVAL

Arlington High's Fall-Winter Survival course is a no-hassle, outdoors course open to Juniors and Seniors for credit.

Indoor and outdoor classes instruct the participants in such skills as fire and shelter building, edible plants, search and rescue, map/compass work and first aid.

These skills are tested on a fall skills weekend and the solo mock survival situation in January.

This winter we experienced sub-zero temperatures, snow depths of 36" and solitude to be at peace with the wilderness as it was meant to be. Those who made the trip know they didn't miss a beautiful, mind blowing experience.

Many thanks Marzina and Don

MENOTOMY PRESCHOOL

The Menotomy Preschool is a group of nine students, both juniors and seniors, who, under the direction of Mr. Stanley Kuziel, operate a nursery school for children ages four and five. The ration of teachers to children is two to one.

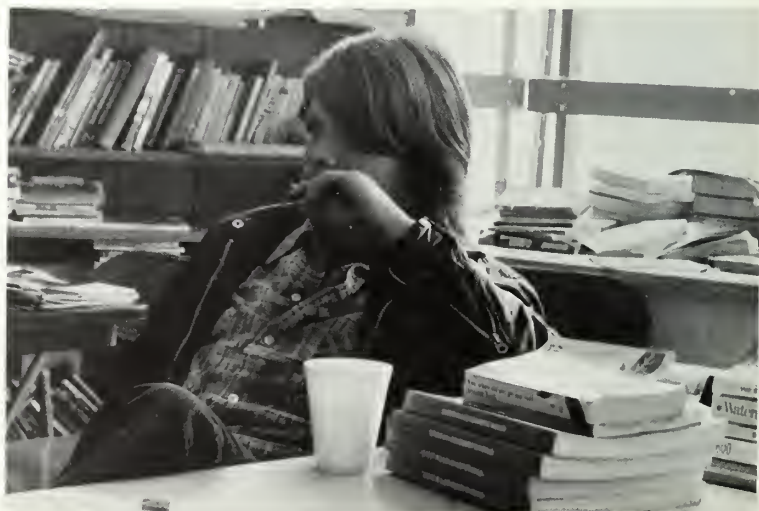

The school is divided into a variety of areas: cognitive, dramatic play, science, art, blocks, and jungle gym. Each area is supervised by one of the students who has prepared an activity for that area. Each day we follow a planned curriculum which is designed to help prepare the child for kindergarten. It is designed to meet the individual child's needs and to prepare him for both small and large group situations. Other areas covered are concepts of numbers, colors, and the alphabet. Also included in the day are activities designed to help develop the child's social needs; ability to follow directions, interaction with other children and independence. The use of music, dance, and art are also incorporated in order that the child may express himself and his needs to others.

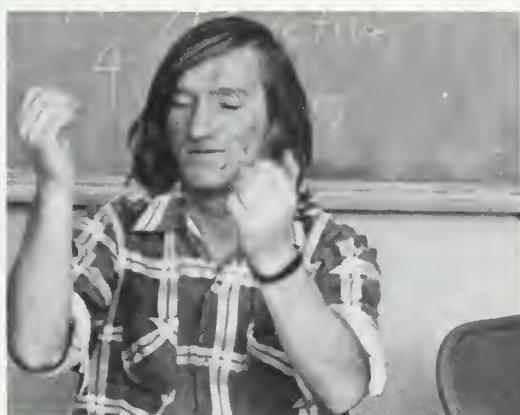

Work is also done with each child on a one to one basis. A student will work with a child on special needs such as speech therapy. We also work with behavior modification and imaginative play, such as the child using pictures to tell a story.

We feel that this is both worthwhile and profitable experience since it helps one to understand the needs and development of young children. It also is a preparation or parenthood and adulthood as well as a potential teaching career in a nursery, elementary school, or just teaching one's own children one day. We would like to give special thanks to Mrs. Roach.

S.T.E.P.

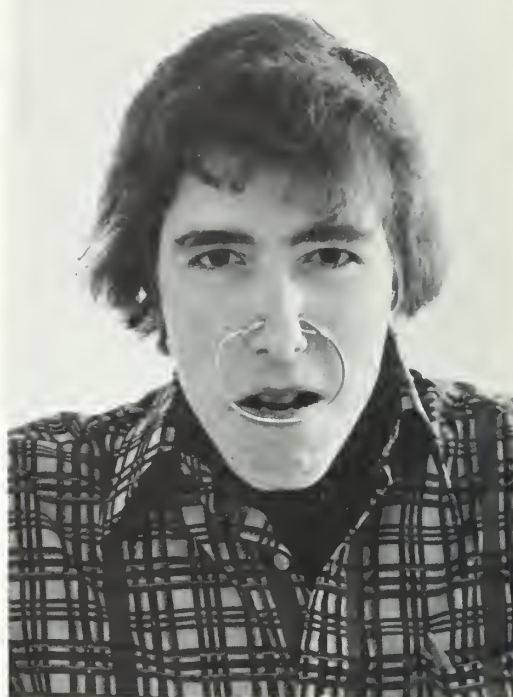

CO-ED GYM

Arlington High, in a first this year, proved they could keep up with the times and remain within the law at the same time — Co-ed Gym. Males and Females participated in physical education, sports, and other activities. Reactions were somewhat mixed since neither sex really understood the change.

GILBERT AND SULLIVAN

Gilbert and Sullivan is one of the fastest growing clubs in school. It was composed of over 100 members and provided an outlet for all students, to participate in the Annual show; this past year the well-known musical "Hello Dolly." Under the direction of Mr. Roberts, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Laber, members were exposed to all elements of stage production — acting, singing, set-work, and a unity that can only be experienced by active members to get the job done right. Each actor's individual style went into making the show a great success.

To diversify the club's interests this year, the officers expanded the club activities to include Cabaret night, a spaghetti dinner at which G&S members doubled as singing waiters, and waitresses to entertain their guests.

No member could ever forget the hours of rehearsing, coming in on snow days, the parties, or the joy, laughter, and satisfaction that came about when friends joined together for a mutual interest.

DRAMA CLUB

The 1976-'77 Drama Club presentation of Interview will be entered into this year's State High School Drama Festival. "Interview" was a non-realistic presentation about problems of identity and de-humanization in contemporary American Life.

The Drama Club went to Boston and viewed Broadway shows which were on tour. This past year they saw the musical production, "Grease." The faculty advisor for the Drama Club is Mr. Frank Roberts, who is the director for the Festival entry and also directs the Gilbert and Sullivan annual production.

ORCHESTRA

The orchestra is a talented group of musicians who meet daily under the direction of Mr. Thebodo. They rehearse pieces to perform in three or four concerts a year. The orchestra provides a welcome break from the monotony of regimented classes.

The highlight of the year is always the exchange concert, this year to Virginia. The orchestra, along with the symphonic band and choral groups, has been hosted by a number of high schools including ones in Scarsdale, New York and Toronto. In turn, students from the performing arts department hosted students from these cities who performed and partied with them.

We will always remember David's "Good Morning" and "Make it a good day," Mr. T. — Let's get going, stop the gabbing and get on stage!, We're recording today (As always), Toronto forever — snow and ice, Scarsdale mansions, maids, Parties, Why not Brandenburg one more time?, I don't want to play today! Come on Mr. T., We need a break., Drill, Drill, Drill, It's got to be perfect or I simply won't present it, this is so frustrating, bow together, totally horrid but we're getting there, rather eccentric gum chewer but a great guy. We love you Mr. T., Mr. Laber., Why not Mr. Smith too!

JAZZ ENSEMBLE

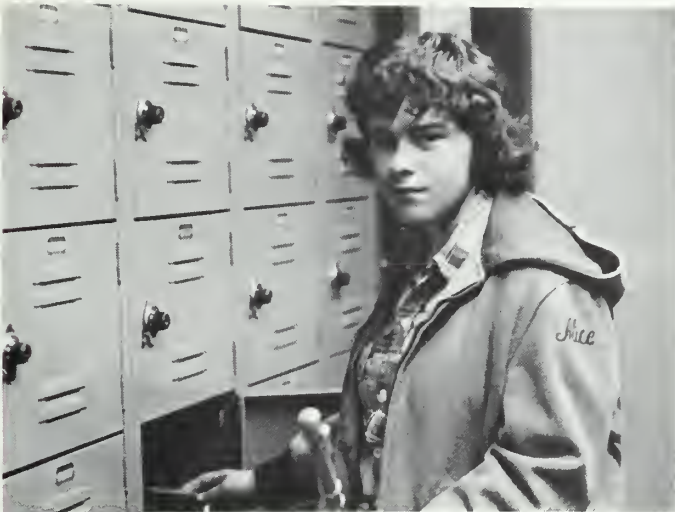

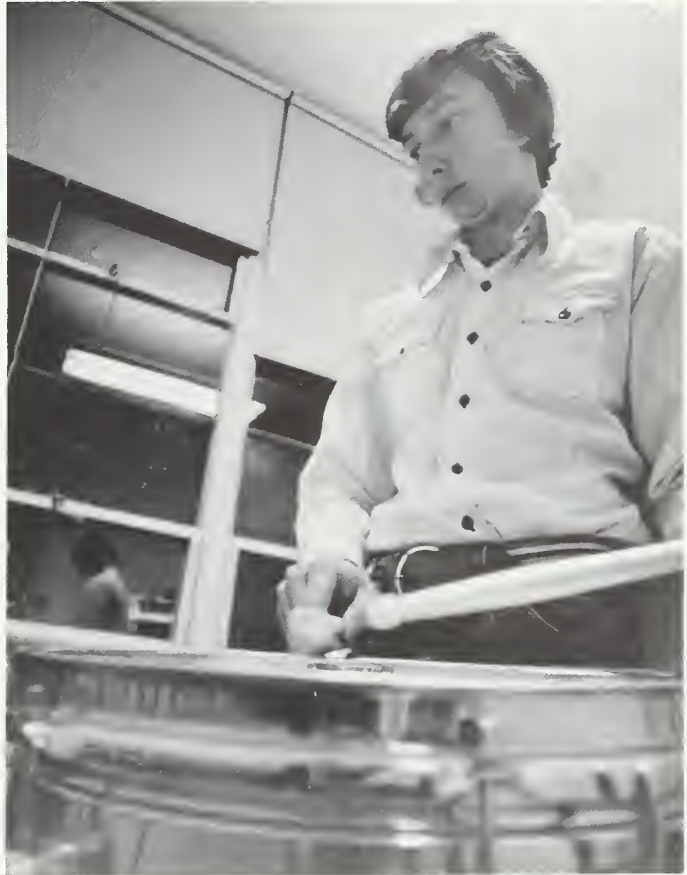

The Jazz Ensemble is a select musical group of instrumentalists. The musical selections performed by this talented group of seniors range from early big band swing to the latest jazz-rock. The ensemble is molded into a cohesive unit which performs in concerts and enters many competitions. This year, the band entered competitions at Stoneham High School, the University of New Hampshire, Quinnipac College, and the District Competition.

This past year has been a climactic year for the Jazz Ensemble as most of the band is made up of seniors who have been playing in the ensemble for four years. Because of this, the upcoming years will be rebuilding ones. But the past years have developed a comraderie among the "Cats" which will last for a long time. Many memories have also been made; blues sessions before practice . . . the rides home . . . harassment of the establishment at every turn . . . "Close enough for jazz" . . . the production of two all-star Distict Jazz Band members, Dean Glines on drums and Greg Tarbox on bass . . . "so tight it takes Vaseline to get through" . . . G.A.C.

But through it all, the music has not suffered and occasionally we've settled down to business and produced some of the finest sounds ever to come out of the Performing Arts Department. The Jazz Ensemble was a great experience for all.

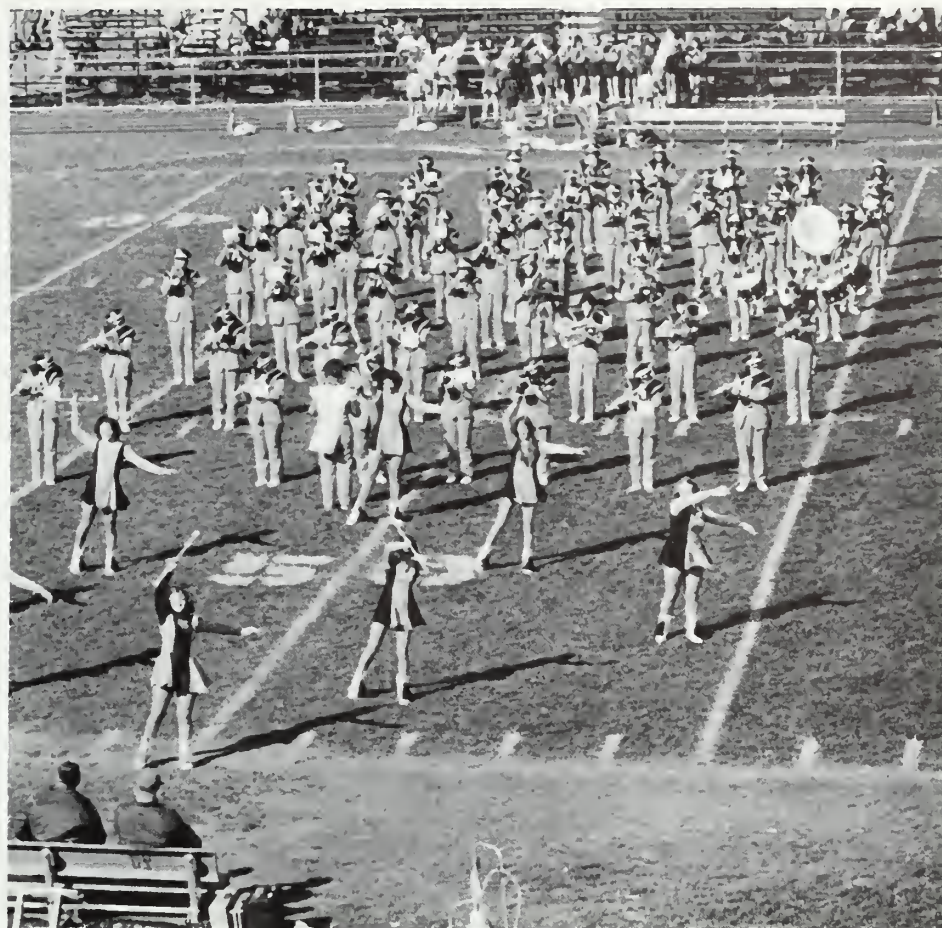

SYMPHONIC BAND

MARCHING BAND

"The Band" is actually a two-fold organization. The Symphonic Band, a regular school course, gives concerts year round. Under the direction of Gerald Thebodo, it meets every day during fifth period. For the first part of the year, the band prepared light music for the Pops Concert. Following the performance, the band assumed a more serious attitude and prepared for the Masterworks Concert. This past year, it was entered in the state-wide competition.

The Marching Band is an extra-curricular activity consisting of sixty selected musicians who are commonly seen on the football field and in parades. The band, under the direction of Pasquale Tassone, Buddy Stevens and Drum Major Pam Spencer performed at all the football games. They also marched in the Veterans' Day and Patriots' Day parades.

Saturdays were sacrificed to cheer on the team as well as to harass the Cheerleaders. We made up cheers of our own and engaged in "Innocent" mischief. A union was organized for the rowdier of the fools who led the band in the previously mentioned shenanigans. A record breaking year was marked as Dean Glines wallowed through the last of his six year stretch as the leader of the drum section.

Band is a thankless job, but we did it our way.

The Harmonettes was a vocal group composed of fourteen girls divided into quartets. It also included two pianists. Throughout the year they received opportunities to sing in public as well as in school musical presentations. They participated in the annual music trip with the orchestra and other musical performing groups in Springfield, Virginia. It was certainly a rewarding year and we thank Mr. Smith for his valuable leadership.

ART CLUB

The Art Club is a group of interested students who meet together to work on art related projects. As in past years, this year the club has worked on jewelry making for both pleasure and business. Proceeds from selling jewelry help club members to work on other projects such as drawing, painting, pottery and other crafts. Another activity of the Art Club has been to sponsor a Spring Art Fair in which the artwork of students is displayed and sold. Art teacher Mrs. Eskedal is the faculty advisor.

A TRUE STORY

Grant me the serenity to accept that which I cannot change,
The courage to change
that which I can,
And the wisdom to know the difference.

~the most important thing in life is not the triumph, but the struggle.
The essential thing is not to have conquered but to have fought well.

Pierre de Coubertin

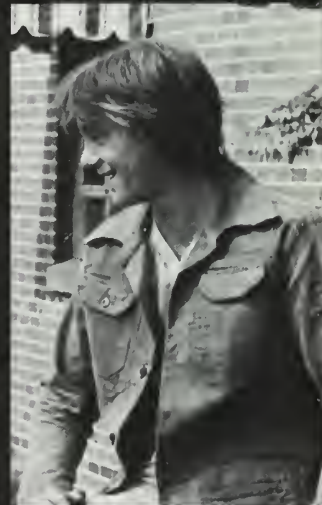

If you cannot do great things, do small things in a great way.

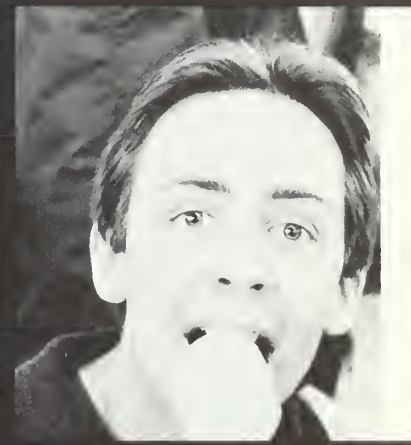

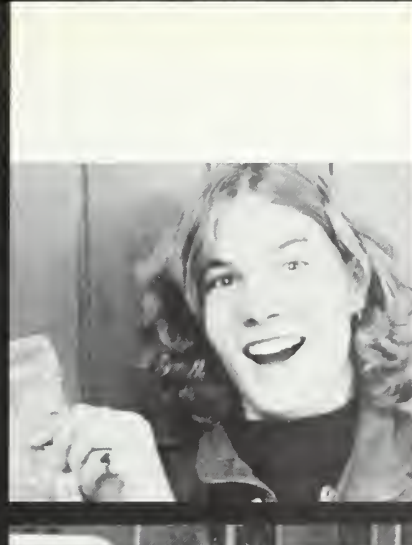

If I could save time in a bottle
 The first thing that I'd like to do
 Is to save every day
 'Til Eternity passes away.

Jim Croce

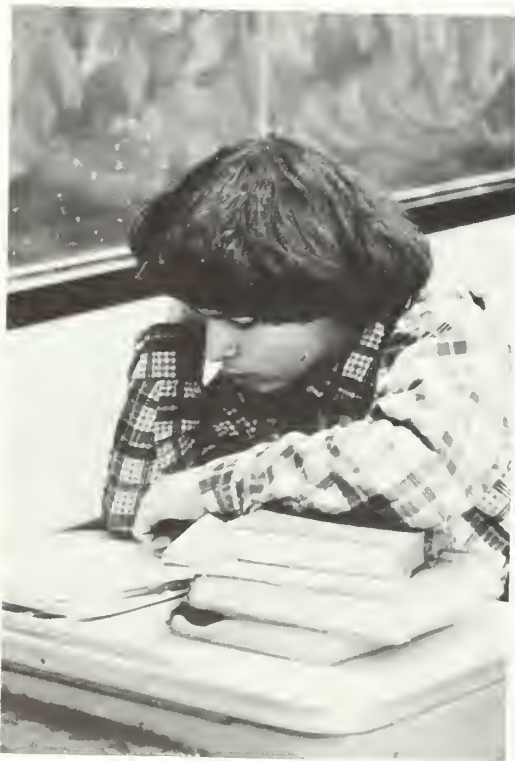

I shall pass through this life but once.
 Any good, therefore, that I can do
 Or any kindness I can show to any fellow creature,
 Let me do it now.
 Let me not defer or neglect it,
 For I shall not pass this way again.

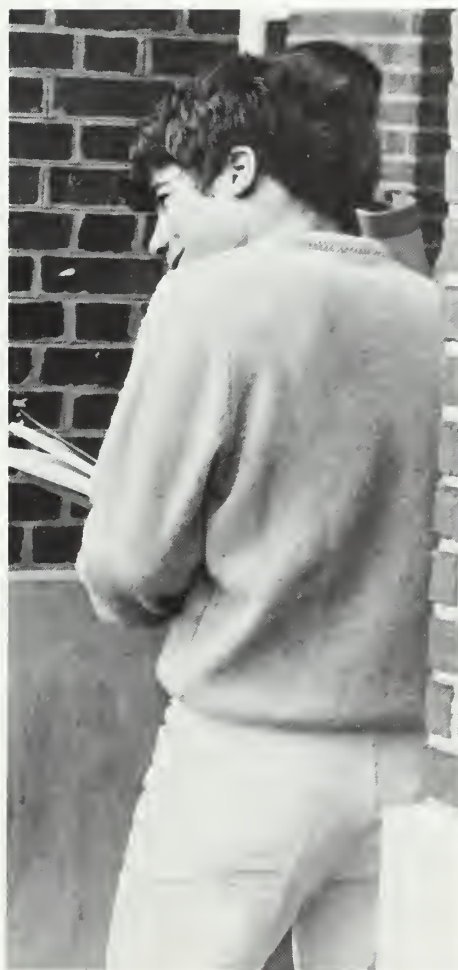

Etienne de Grellet

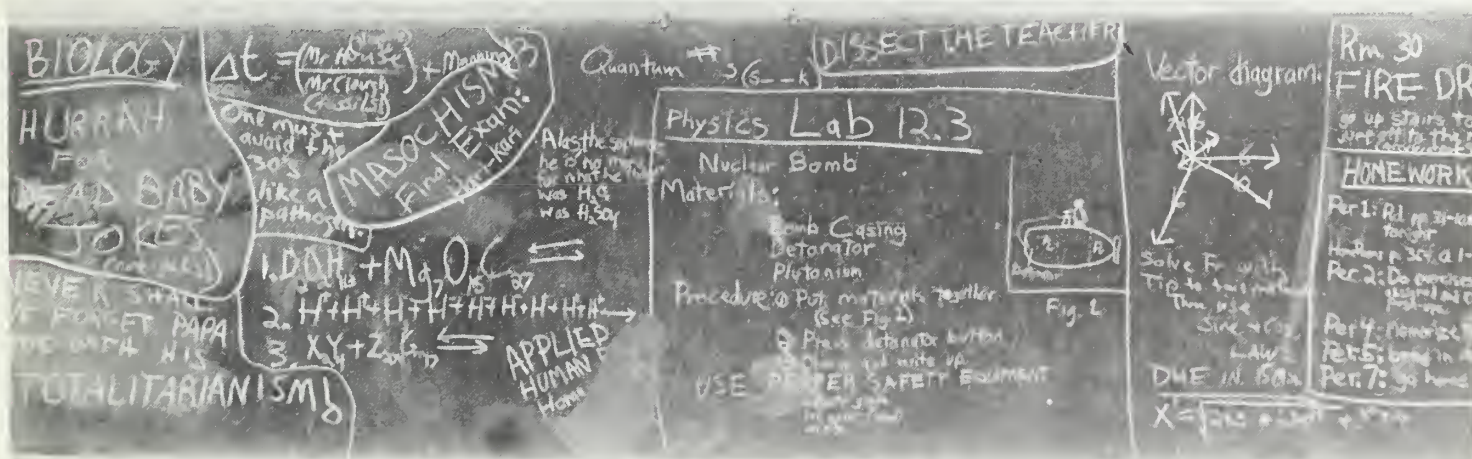

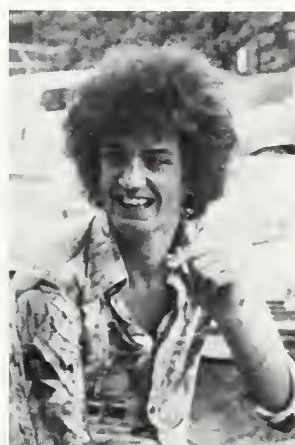

You will find as you grow older that the first thing needful to make the world a tolerable place to live in is to recognize the inevitable selfishness of humanity.
